GLENNON PARTY ARRIVES IN ROME, CARDINAL FACES CROWDED WEEK

Audiences, Receptions, Sightseeing Tours and Papal Consistories on Program in the Eternal City.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, Feb. 14—John Cardinal Glennon, venerable St. Louis prelate and dean of American archbishops, arrived here today, completing his three-day journey to the Eternal City, for acceptance of the red hat from Pope Pius XII next week. There await him here the highest honors, and probably the most crowded days of his long career.

The Constellation plane Star of Rome, carrying the St. Louis prelate, Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York, Thomas Cardinal Tien of China, and clerical and lay guests, landed at Ciampino airport at 4:12 p.m. (10:12 a.m. St. Louis time). It left Orly Field, Paris, at 2 p.m. (8 a.m. in St. Louis).

Before their departure from Paris, Cardinal Spellman celebrated mass in Notre Dame Cathedral, and Bishop Tien, first of his race to attain the cardinalate, officiated at the Church of the Madeleine. The 83-year-old Cardinal Glennon, who has borne well the strain of his flight from his home and of Tuesday's visit to his birthplace in Ireland, rested at the Grand Hotel.

Reception and Mass in Paris. Following their arrival in Paris yesterday afternoon, the three prelates attended a rosary service at the Madeleine, and a reception at the residence of Ambassador Jefferson Caffery. They were unable to meet Emmanuel Cardinal Suhard, Archbishop of Paris, who is now in Rome for next week's ceremonies.

At Notre Dame, former Post-masters General James A. Farley and Frank Walker attended mass and, with Walker's daughter, Mrs. Robert Ameno of New York, re-joined the United Nations Organization delegation, said his daughter would go to Rome in Cardinal Spellman's plane.

Until Saturday of next week, the programs of Cardinal Glennon and the other new American members of the Sacred College, Archbishops Spellman, Samuel Stritch of Chicago and Edward Mooney of Detroit, are closely filled. Audiences, receptions, sightseeing tours, and, most important, no less than four Papal consistories, await them.

Cardinals Stritch and Mooney, who arrived here by air yesterday, were among seven of the new appointees who were received in audience today by the Pope.

The others were the newly designated Cardinals from South America, Archbishop Carlos Carmelo de Vasconcellos Motta of Sao Paulo, Brazil; Archbishop Jaime de Barros Campos of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Archbishop

DEADLINE FOR OBTAINING CITY AUTO STICKERS IS EXTENDED FOR 10 DAYS

The deadline for obtaining city automobile license stickers was extended 10 days today to conform with the deadline for obtaining state automobile licenses, which is midnight, Feb. 25. Frank A. Britton, city license collector, had set the original deadline at midnight tomorrow. He announced that about 80,000 license stickers had been sold. Total number usually sold annually here is approximately 130,000.

Motorists applying for the city license sticker must present the title for the automobile and a city personal property tax receipt.

AMERICAN LETTERS TO GERMANS ASSAIL ALLIES, NAZIS' TRIAL

Army Intercepts Correspondence—One Writer Alleges 'Intrigue' by U.S. Government.

By J. WES GALLAGHER

FRANKFURT, Feb. 14 (AP)—

United States Army headquarters disclosed today that some Americans had written letters to Germans criticizing the Allies, praising the Germans, attacking the United States Government and lamenting the bombing of German cities. The Army said the letters were intercepted as clandestine correspondence in or out of Germany for Germans is forbidden at the present time.

"The end of this cursed war brought us very little joy, a resident of Buffalo, N. Y., wrote. 'It began with lies and crime and ended the same way. I wonder how long this fool play of a Nuremberg trial will go. When that is over the honorable judges can start to cut each other's throats with atomic bombs.'

A United States Army finance office employee in Los Angeles wrote: 'There is no hint in going into the political angle of the war. We Americans are aware of much intrigue and corrupt deceit toward our people by our Government but we are helpless just as most people in any country are.'

A Pennsylvanian, writing to a friend in Mannheim, said: 'We are England's slaves; we helped England in the first world war to protect her 1500 lords through American blood and four billion dollars. Thus England won the war...'

Butter price boost urged to avert black marketing.

Dairyman Says That Otherwise None of It Will Be Sold in Regular Channels.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—

John Brandt, president of the Dairy Products Marketing Association, urged today an increase in the price of butter to prevent its diversion to black markets or its sale at a loss.

He told a special House committee investigating food scarcities that within two weeks "practically all" butter will be sold under such circumstances.

"In fact," he added, "the situation has about already reached that stage. The creameries simply can't afford to make butter at the present ceiling prices."

Brandt said "millions of housewives are now buying whipping cream in cans, and butter themselves, thereby letting a good part of the butterfat and skim milk go down the sewer." He added that he had been flooded with letters from women wanting to know how to churn.

VOTERS OPPOSED SOVIET SLATE

MOSCOW, Feb. 14 (AP)—

Out of 101,450,946 votes cast in the Soviet Union's elections last Sunday, 1,638,654 were recorded against the Communist and non-party bloc candidates, according to tabulations today.

With seats to be filled in both the Council of the Union and the Council of Deputies, only one candidate was nominated for each position. Voters who wished to register opposition turned in blank ballots. More than 380,400 votes were declared invalid.

Truman Still Officer in Pendergast Club; Hopes 'Outfit Is Going Good'

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 14—

President Harry S. Truman is still vice president of the Jackson Democratic Club—the official name for the Pendergast organization in Kansas City—and recently extended his good wishes in paying his 1946 dues.

On the club house wall at 1908 Main street, where the late "Boss Tom" Pendergast once reigned as political boss of Missouri, there hung today a photograph of the presidential check for $8, close by a letter on White House stationery addressed to James M. Pendergast, nephew of "Boss Tom" and president of the club. The letter, dated Dec. 7, follows:

"Dear Jim:

"I am enclosing you check for $8 in payment of my Jackson Democratic Club dues. I hope the outfit is still going good."

"Sincerely yours

"Harry."

Truman, who has been vice president of the club about 20 years, from the time he was a politically obscure county judge, wrote in reply to a form letter notifying members that dues for 1946 were payable Jan. 1.

The third officer of the club is Bernard W. Gnefow, secretary-treasurer, and former confidential secretary to Tom Pendergast. It also has an executive board of 16, composed of the organization's bosses of each ward.

Truman, it was learned, was originally selected as a vice president of the club because he was from Jackson county. At that time the club had several vice presidents and it was deemed good politics to have one of them represent the county.

Later, the other vice presidential offices were abolished but Truman remained in office. He was vice president in 1939 when Pendergast went to Leavenworth penitentiary for Federal income tax evasion. Under terms of his parole Pendergast no longer could participate in politics and his name was dropped as chairman of the club's executive board and from the membership roster. He died in January 1945.

G.M. HEAD DENIES INDUSTRY PLOTTED AGAINST LABOR OR PRICE CONTROL

Says Business Men Met in New York Because 'All Were Looking Down Same Gun,' Meaning Strikes.

DETROIT, Feb. 14 (AP)—C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corp., testifying at a National Labor Relations Board hearing today, denied that a meeting of American business leaders in New York last December drew up a program for a fight against union wage demands and Government price control.

He was called again in the NLRB hearing on charges by the CIO United Auto Workers that his corporation had failed to bargain in good faith with the union in the wage dispute that has made 175,000 workers idle for 86 days.

The question of the meeting was brought up by Attorney Harold Cranfield of the NLRB staff. He referred to a luncheon given by General Motors at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Dec. 19, the day before a presidential fact-finding board began its inquiry into G.M.'s wage dispute with the UAW-CIO.

Lists Those at Meeting.

Wilson said representatives of such corporations as General Motors, United States Steel, Westinghouse and the meat packing industry were at the luncheon. They were there, Wilson said, "because they were all looking down the same gun I was." He explained he meant all were facing strikes in their own industry.

"We just discussed the hell of a shape we were in," he said. "No agreements came out of that meeting; none were intended; there was nothing sinister about the meeting. In fact it's too bad that group can't make decisions for its country."

As the NLRB hearing proceeded, Federal Mediator James F. Dewey renewed his efforts to bring G.M. and the UAW-CIO together on a wage and contract agreement.

"There are no immediate plans for joint conferences, and I'll just go back and forth between the parties for a day or so yet," he said.

"We're trying to find a basis for getting together again on this thing," he added, referring to the UAW's withdrawal Tuesday from the negotiating session at which G.M. offered an 18½-cent wage rise (16½ per cent).

Prediction by Thomas.

Coupled with Dewey's efforts to bring the parties together was a prediction by UAW President R. J. Thomas that the strike would be settled "in the not too distant future."

"I don't see how it can go on for long unless G.M. wants to be completely broke," he said as he emerged from a one-hour session with Dewey last night.

Dewey said G.M. had indicated to him it was willing to resume negotiations, and added, "I'm sure."

PUBLIC DEBT HITS NEW HIGH

Total Is $279,488,831,576 or $1920 for Each Person.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—

Treasury figures today showed the public debt again had touched a new high. The total stands at $279,488,831,576—an increase of $44,215,451 over the previous high, reported 10 days ago.

Average share in the debt of each American is $1920, on the basis of a population estimate of 140,343,000 at the start of this month.

CHESTER BOWLES REPORTED 'ON WAY OUT' IN DISPUTE ON WAGES AND PRICES

Several Congressmen Say He Will Not Succeed Collet and Will Lose Job as Administrator of OPA.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—

Several Congressmen told reporters today that Administrator Chester Bowles of the Office of Price Administration was "on the way out" of Government service.

These reports were in contrast to information which went the rounds last weekend that Bowles was about to be promoted to the post of stabilization director.

One anonymous Senator said that as a result of the wage-price policy controversy among those most closely concerned with the question, Bowles not only would not get the stabilization post but eventually would be let out of his OPA job. An anonymous member of the House also insisted that Bowles was "out."

Reasons Not Clarified. Bowles was told of the reports as he lunched in his office with OPA staff members. He made this comment: "I doubt it."

He was scheduled to visit the White House this afternoon. Reasons Not Clarified. Bowles reportedly changed prospects were not clarified at once.

As recently as Friday, the OPA administrator's close associates said he had assurance he would become stabilization director as successor to John Caskie Collet, with authority over both wage and price policies.

A decision on a wage-price formula appeared imminent. In addition to Bowles, President Truman summoned other top economic policy makers to the White House.

$5 Rise Reported. An Administration source said the formula now provided a $5 across-the-board increase for steel and permitted price increases generally to take care of "approved" costs.

Bowles was reported as unwilling to go along with some of the language of the directive.

Truman described as annoyed by Bowles' objection to a proposed statement when it was taken to him last night by Paul A. Porter, Federal Communications Commission chairman. Porter had been mentioned as Bowles' successor in earlier speculation that Bowles would be made economic stabilization director.

The Administration source, who termed this afternoon's meeting as a showdown among governmental agencies and both steel companies and steel union representatives were agreeable to the $5 a ton steel price to take care of the presidential recommendation for an 18½-cent hourly wage increase.

Review in Three Months. This source said that the formula as now drawn would allow the $5 price increase for three months and provide specific orders to OPA to review steel costs then and make adjustments accordingly.

The general industrial policy

SMOKE LAW CASE DROPPED; HOTEL 'A BIG TAXPAYER'

Police Judge Grodzki Explains the Roosevelt Is Co-operating Now; City to Appeal Ruling.

Eight charges of violating the smoke elimination ordinance against the Roosevelt Hotel, 4901 Delmar boulevard, were dismissed today by Provisional Police Judge Frank B. Grodzki on the ground that the hotel is now co-operating to eliminate the smoke nuisance and anyway, he said, "it is a big taxpayer."

Assistant City Counselor William Freilvogel, objecting to the judge's ruling, said: "The city has proved violations and if you dismiss the case, the city will appeal it. However, if you fine the defendant and place the hotel on probation, we will go along with you."

"I'll stand on my reputation as a lawyer," Judge Grodzki replied. "I know the Roosevelt Hotel. The city inspector has testified the hotel is now co-operating 100 per cent and making every effort to eliminate the smoke nuisance. I'll dismiss the case. The hotel is a big taxpayer, isn't it?"

"Yes, judge, but we are all taxpayers," Freilvogel answered. "Smoke Inspector Harry Perkins testified that the hotel had violated the smoke elimination ordinance on the following dates: twice on Oct. 19; Oct. 26; Nov. 2; Nov. 23; twice on Dec. 14 and once on Dec. 17. He said in each instance the hotel chimney was emitting dense smoke."

Alderman George N. Daugherty, counsel for the hotel, presented furnace repair bills, which showed the hotel had spent $860 for furnace repairs Oct. 18. When asked to produce this, Perkins said he knew of the repairs, but was not sure they concerned the elimination of smoke. Daugherty also pointed out that the hotel until recently used coal that cost $4 a ton and had changed to a more expensive, less volatile quality costing $7 a ton.

Strikes in Brief

Continuing labor disputes keep about 1,430,000 idle.

Major developments:

Shipping—Thirty-five hundred AFL tugboat workers return to jobs in New York harbor after paralyzing 10-day work stoppage; arbitrating wage-hour dispute; school reopen and brownout will be lifted tomorrow.

Automobiles—Federal mediator hopeful of resumption of wage negotiations between General Motors and United Auto Workers as UAW President Thomas predicts settlement of 86-day-old strike "in the not too distant future."

Steel—President Truman's economic staff called to new meeting in efforts to reach agreement on new wage-price policy designed to halt strikes; some members of Congress say OPA Chief Chester Bowles is on the way out of Government service.

TRUMAN SUFFERS HARD BLOW IN RESIGNATION OF ICKES

TRUMAN'S REPLY: 'LETTER LEAVES BUT ONE CHOICE'; ICKES'S CAUSTIC COMMENT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—

The Department of Interior made public last night President Truman's letter accepting the resignation of Harold L. Ickes as Secretary of the Interior.

The letter, dated Feb. 13, and addressed to "My Dear Harold," said:

"I have your letter of Feb. 12 tendering your resignation as Secretary of the Interior. The letter leaves me but one choice of action."

"I therefore accept your resignation, effective at the close of business on Friday, Feb. 15, next. I also consider that this terminates all of your other governmental activities."

"Under the law Mr. Oscar L. Chapman, assistant Secretary, will serve as acting Secretary of the Interior."

"With every good wish,

"Very sincerely yours,

"HARRY S. TRUMAN."

ICKES immediately replied:

"My dear Mr. President:

"I deeply appreciate the generosity and graciousness displayed by your letter of Feb. 13. What particularly appeals to me is your statement, 'I also consider that this (my resignation) terminates all of your other governmental activities.' You will pardon me if I remark that this is in the nature of supererogation. I assure you that I have had no secret design, having resigned as Secretary of the Interior, to hold on to any other office under your jurisdiction."

"Sincerely yours,

"HAROLD L. ICKES."

How Webster's Defines Ickes's 'Pickwickian' and 'Supererogation'

By JOSEPH HANLON

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Harold L. Ickes, retiring (but not retiring) Secretary of the Interior, sent some reporters running for dictionaries to interpret the blustering language of his departure from President Truman's cabinet. Eastern newspapers today quoted dictionary definitions of such terms as "Pickwickian" and "supererogation," which appeared in his radio talk last night.

"I wonder," Ickes mused before his radio audience, "if the President was speaking in the Pickwickian sense when he told me to tell the truth?"

ICKES TEXT: 'PAULEY DID NOT SPEAK THE TRUTH'

Inquiry by Its 'Ablest Lawyer' Very Least Justice Department Could Do, He Tells the Nation

Renews Assertion That Oil Man's Proposal on Tidelands Was 'Rawest Proposition Ever Made to Me'—Says He Was Prejudged by Truman.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)

FOLLOWING is the prepared text of the radio address of Secretary of the Interior Ickes last night:

I am here tonight to explain why I chose to resign after almost 13 years in the high post of Secretary of the Interior with which President Roosevelt honored me on March 4, 1933.

My task is no easy one, nor was the decision to resign an easy one. But a man has to live with himself. I have to spend the rest of my life with Harold L. Ickes, and I could no longer much as I regret it, retain my self-respect and stay in the Cabinet of President Truman.

In my letter of resignation to the President, I proposed that my resignation take effect at the closing of business on March 31. My reason for this was that the hearings on the proposed Anglo-American oil treaty will begin on March 4. I am proud of this treaty which I nurtured and raised by bottle from the beginning. I think that I had more to do with setting it up than any other man in the Government. I wanted to be here for those hearings. However, I told the President that if it was his desire that I should retire at an earlier date, I would be glad to do so.

The President's Note. In a brief note late this morning, he told me that my term of office would end on Feb. 15, the day after tomorrow. I suppose that after being here almost 13 years, I shall have no trouble in two days in picking up the odds and ends which have accumulated during that period. He also said that he considered that my resignation terminated all of my other governmental activities. I regard this remark of the President's as in the nature of supererogation. It was like when a man's tree falls to the ground and all its branches go with it.

On no occasion did the President ever tell me that he proposed to nominate Mr. Pauley for Under Secretary of the Navy. Of course, I had seen reports to this effect in the newspapers and this possibility seemed to be on the tongue of many people in Washington.

Word came to me indirectly that Mr. Pauley himself had told the President of my probable opposition to his nomination. In the circumstances, it surprised me that the President did not frankly ask me what might be the basis of such opposition. Late Thursday afternoon, Jan. 31, I received a telegram from Senator Walsh, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate, asking me, at the request of Senator Tobey, to appear before his committee on the nomination of Mr. Pauley the following morning at 11:30. The cabinet met at 10 o'clock on that day. At almost exactly 11, as we were about to adjourn, I left my chair so as to reach President Truman first and showed him the telegram from Senator Walsh. He still refrained from asking me if I had any objections to this nomination. All that he said was "of course you will have to tell the truth but be as gentle as you can with Ed Pauley."

I did best he could. I proceeded to the meeting of the Naval Affairs Committee and I think that the record will show that I did everything that I could in behalf of Mr. Pauley except to perjure myself. It is rather shocking to me to learn that certain members of the Democratic party, of standing and supposed reputation, evidently are incensed that I did not commit perjury. Even if I could subscribe to the theory that a man obviously unfit for office for which he has been nominated should be confirmed by the Senate, I dissent vigorously from the notion that one should forswear himself in order to get an office for an unfit man, or even for a fit one.

Mr. Pauley followed me on the stand. Senator Brewster asked him whether he had heard my evidence that morning to the effect that he had suggested to me that if he could be assured that the Tidelands bill would not be filed, he could raise three or four hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Pauley replied, "That statement is not true."

Subsequently, I received another summons from the naval affairs committee which required me to take with me all memoranda relating to the conversations with Mr. Pauley with respect to campaign contributions and Federal title to offshore oil lands in California. On this occasion, under questioning from Senator Tobey, I read my memoranda—there were several of them on the subject—to the committee. In one of these memoranda, written only a few days after Mr. Pauley visited me, I wrote that he had made me the "rawest proposition that I had ever heard of." I feel no desire to modify that characterization.

Position Untenable. At the President's press conference on Thursday, Feb. 7, he definitely aligned himself with Mr. Pauley as against me, thus making my position as a member of his Cabinet untenable. Of course, this was his privilege, but I question the propriety of his saying that I had not consulted him in advance of my testimony with respect to Pauley and particularly of his statement that "Ickes can very well be mistaken as well as the rest of us."

It seemed to me clear from what President Truman said at this press conference that he had prejudged this case without giving me a chance to be heard.

My feeling is that, since President Truman was not present at the hearing and presumably had not read the record, it was not proper for him, even though he be the President of the United States, to pass judgment on a question of veracity between Mr. Pauley and myself. On this issue I am ready to appear before any competent tribunal at any time, although, of course, I should want one that would not announce, or even form, its opinion in advance of a full and careful consideration of all the evidence.

As to whether I had or had not lied, President Truman, in advance of my testimony on the Pauley nomination, my reply is that he had full notice of the probability of my embarrassment, plus several opportunities, in addition to those he might create at will, to ask me the reason why I might oppose Pauley.

I wish that every American could read the record of Mr. Pauley's testimony before the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate. At the very least, I hope that the Attorney General of the United States will assign one of his ablest lawyers to a scrutiny of Mr. Pauley's denial under oath of activities that he admits in other parts of the record. He said that he had "never asked any Senator or Representative to vote in favor of or against any bill involving tidelands rights or any other matter related thereto." He insisted that "never at any time" did he request "President Roosevelt or Attorney General Biddle to delay, postpone or withdraw any suit relating in any way to the tidelands." He categorically denied that he had "presented his viewpoint on the tidelands issue to President Roosevelt, Attorney General Francis Biddle . . . or to Secretary Ickes and . . . others."

I challenge these statements. To the contrary, I charge that Mr. Edwin W. Pauley was not speaking the truth when he said under oath that he had never attempted to influence President Roosevelt, Attorney General Biddle or any other public official in connection with the tidelands suits. Such a statement is simply not true.

Why, I remember his coming to my office to tell me that he had made representations to others in the Administration against these tidelands suits. It is on record that he solicited Attorney General Biddle in the same behalf. He left no stone unturned to prevent the filing of suits that he now, with pretended innocence, declares that he had no little interest in that he never said anything to anyone on the subject.

"I Told the Truth." Things have come to a pretty pass if, under pressure from party organizations, men are not only expected but are urged to testify under oath to what is not true. I wonder what President Truman meant in that last remark when he said, "of course you must tell the truth but be as gentle as you can with Ed Pauley."

I told the truth and my oral testimony was supported by written memoranda made immediately following the visits of Mr. Pauley to my office. I told the truth with the result that the President for several days, although I was a member of his cabinet, was unwilling to see me. I told the truth with the result that following my voluntary resignation I have been graciously allowed less than three days to clean up the accumulation of 13 years in the Department of the Interior.

I am glad to go. But I want to make it clear that I applaud President Truman for advocating the policies for which his great predecessor, Franklin D. Roosevelt, fought. I want also to make it clear that he has made some excellent appointments—men of character and ability who are devoted to the public welfare. However, lately I have noticed a trend that has seriously disturbed me as a citizen. Recently there has been a decided and alarming deterioration in the quality of his appointments. Now it is all very well to advocate policies that are in the interest of the people, but policies are not self-enforcing. Policies and laws must be fought for and enforced or their substance will cease away and nothing worthwhile will remain. It takes men of character, strong men who expect to speak the truth and to hear the truth, to give form to the policies and the laws for which President Roosevelt fought and which President Truman favors in his speeches.

So, men and women of America, this was the way in which the problem presented itself to me. Should I have put the country first or the Administration first? So long as I can remember, I have owed allegiance to America. I have never subscribed to the view that party allegiance should override the interest of the country. I do not now subscribe to that view. Nor have I ever believed, as the Nazis did in Germany, that the interests of the party and the interests of the country are always identical. I do not now believe this.

I have enjoyed my 13 years as Secretary of the Interior and I feel a sense of loyalty and obligation to the fine men and women who have served that department with me. Although I am about to retire from public office the fight for good government and good administration that I have waged all of my life, will go on.

VARIED COMMENT BY DEMOCRATS IN SENATE ON ICKES

Southerners Express Delight Over Resignation—Westerners Praise His Record.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—

Senatorial comment on the resignation of Secretary of the Interior Ickes ranged today from praise of his administration by westerners to criticism of his politics by southerners.

Senator Tobey (Rep.), New Hampshire, who is leading the fight against the nomination of Edwin W. Pauley for Under Secretary of the Navy, in hearings before the Naval Committee, said that he was "pleased" to hear that Mr. Ickes has done "a good job" and that "it couldn't have helped Pauley much."

Another committee member, Senator McClellan (Dem.), Arkansas, remarked that President Truman was charitable in saying that Ickes could have been mistaken about what Pauley told him. There was no mistake about it. Somebody made a deliberate misstatement and one of them had to go. I think it is a wholesome thing for the party that Mr. Ickes has resigned because I never regarded him as a Democrat.

Senator Bankhead (Dem.), Alabama, told reporters that "I think I am entitled to have a Cabinet composed of Democrats, especially in peacetime. I believe that is a respected and proper tradition."

Senator Thomas (Dem.), Oklahoma, termed Ickes' departure "the best news I've heard in 13 years."

"Honesty Not Only" Requirement. Senator Andrews (Dem.), Florida, expressed "delight" in saying that Ickes has been "honest" to the southern people ever since he has been in office.

"I'm glad the President accepted his resignation," Andrews said. "I think we can get along without him. Honesty isn't the only virtue required of a public servant."

Senator Mitchell (Dem.), Washington, said he hopes "we can get someone as Secretary of the Interior who knows the over-all problems of the west and the over-all problems of public power as well as Secretary Ickes."

Senator O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, praised Ickes as "an able and far-seeing administrator" and said his departure ended "one of the most beneficial periods of administration in the Department of the Interior so far as expansion of western development is concerned."

"A Great Loss." New Senator Hatch (Dem.), New Mexico, expressed hope President Truman would name "an outstanding American, preferably from the West," to succeed Ickes.

Representative Douglas (Dem.), Illinois, told reporters that Ickes had "been a fine public servant" and that he was "a great loss."

Representative Price (Dem.), Illinois, said that "I hate to see him passing from public service. I think he's been one of the greatest public servants we ever had."

Representative J. Edgar Hoover (Dem.), Oklahoma, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee handling the Interior Department funds, told a reporter that Ickes' resignation was long overdue.

He added that Ickes "was an extremely expensive luxury to the taxpayers" and that "we've been amazed to learn about some of the instances of his reckless spending."

"Evidence of More Demoralization," Says Taft. FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 14 (AP)—Senator Robert H. Taft (Rep.), Ohio, in an interview here today termed the resignation of Secretary of the Interior Ickes evidence of "more demoralization in the Administration."

"These differences in the Administration have been going right along," he said. "There have been differences on price control and lack of ability to formulate any policy."

He predicted the Republicans would win a House majority in 1946, but said a House "is a long way off" when asked about presidential possibilities for the party.

WASHINGTON U. GIRL TAKING ATOM PETITION TO CAPITAL. Miss Jane Brown, a senior at Washington University, will leave Saturday for Washington to present a petition signed by 1000 students and faculty members to the special Senate Committee on Control of Atomic Energy.

The petition, which opposes the pending May-Johnson bill, urges adequate public hearings before enactment of any legislation, establishment of a control board with limited powers, co-operation with United Nations Organization controls, and unrestricted dissemination of information on atomic energy.

REPORT PAULEY WILL ASK TRUMAN TO WITHDRAW NAME

I want to make it clear that I applaud President Truman for advocating in his speeches the policies for which his great predecessor, Franklin D. Roosevelt, fought. But policies are not self-enforcing. Both must be carried out by straightforward activities and policies.

He repeated his disclosure that Truman had asked him privately to "be as gentle as you can with Ed Pauley" in testifying before the Senate Committee, although Truman did tell him to tell the truth.

"Truth in Pickwickian Sense." "In the light of succeeding circumstances," he went on ironically, "I may be permitted to doubt whether the President was not speaking in a Pickwickian sense when he told me to tell the truth."

He had reference here to Truman's remark at a press conference a week ago that Ickes "may have been mistaken like any of the rest of us" in his damaging testimony against Pauley. It was this apparently casual remark that shocked and embarrassed "Honest Harold," and which, more than any other single incident, led to his resignation.

The President, Ickes said, should not have prejudged the issue of veracity between him and Pauley until he had read the record.

The highlight of his radio talk, much of which was a revised repetition of statements in his letter to the President, was his suggestion that the Attorney General review Pauley's sworn testimony on possible perjury action.

Pauley's Six Contradictions. Senator Charles W. Tobey (Rep.), New Hampshire, ranking minority member of the Naval Affairs Committee, has charged that a study of the records shows that Pauley contradicted himself on at least six major points, including a blanket denial at first that he had ever presented his tidelands viewpoint to Roosevelt or Biddle, and a latter admission that he had done so.

Technically, the Department of Justice could not go into the matter of Pauley's veracity without first being asked to do so by the Senate, and such a request is highly improbable.

In addition, Attorney General Clark was backed for that post by Pauley, his good friend, and political observers believe it wholly unlikely that Clark would make any separate effort to inject the Department of Justice into the matter.

Three Days to Wind Up Affairs. In his talk last night, Ickes spoke bitterly of the President's action in giving him only three days to "clear up 13 years of accumulation" as Secretary of the Interior, the longest run of any predecessor. He also took exception to Truman's assertion in accepting the resignation that Ickes consider that this terminates all of your other governmental activities.

"When a tree falls," said Ickes pointedly, "it comes down with all its branches."

Sentiment in the Senate against confirmation of Pauley appeared to have grown firmer as a result of the resignation of Ickes.

The resignation of the battle-scarred New Deal veteran came as a shock to the capital and gave renewed impetus to the attempt of influential Democratic Senators to persuade President Truman to recall the nomination and save the party from further embarrassment.

Administration stalwarts in the Senate, as well as Republican leaders, saw in the Ickes development a final crushing blow to confirmation of Pauley. The adverse report by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee is now a strong possibility, and rejection on the floor, if called over despite the committee's action, a strong probability.

EX-SENATOR NYE TO SEEK RE-ELECTION TO SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Former Senator Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota Republican, said today he would seek to regain the Senate seat he had held for nearly 20 years prior to Jan. 3, 1945.

Nye, who opposed the Roosevelt administration's foreign policies, said he has decided whether to run against Republican Senators Langer or Young. Langer will be up for re-election to a full six-year term. Young has announced he will seek election to the unexpired term of late Senator John Moses, Democrat.

Moses defeated Nye in the 1944 fall general election, was seated Jan. 3, 1945, and died shortly afterwards. Young was appointed by Gov. Fred Aandahl to fill Moses' post until this year's election.

Press Comment on Ickes: Loss to U.S.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP)—Many of the country's newspapers, commenting editorially on the resignation of Harold L. Ickes as Secretary of Interior, viewed his departure as a distinct loss to the Government and a setback to the Truman Administration.

The New York Herald Tribune, speaking of the Secretary's letter of resignation, said "one can only hope that this unprecedented rebuke will be heeded. . . . The President must realize that personal cronies and political wizards are not adequate material for the staffing of the Government of the United States."

The paper characterized the entire episode as "a damaging blow to the public's confidence in Mr. Truman's administrative capacities."

The New York Times—"Mr. Truman wanted Mr. Pauley so much that he was willing to lose Mr. Ickes. His resignation is a public loss. It weakens President Truman's administration when it needed strengthening."

The Chicago Sun said "In more than 12 years of distinguished service, Harold L. Ickes had measured up to the highest standards of public conduct. . . . Mr. Pauley's confirmation has become unthinkable—and he should withdraw."

The Secretary's departure leaves the machine crowd entrenched, but writhing under a warning they cannot ignore. . . . The President, lost more than a Secretary of the Interior yesterday; he lost a political conscience."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer said Ickes ended his career with "a characteristic outburst which bodes no good for the administration of public conduct."

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette said: "The self-styled curmudgeon succeeded in raising issues, to find parallel of which one must go back to the case of Albert Bacon Fall. . . . and the Ballinger affair in the administration of William Howard Taft."

The Washington Post said that no names, the reporters inferred that he was poking at James K. Vardaman of St. Louis and George Allen.

Hannegan will have difficulty in persuading the public-spirited young men to enter or re-enter the Government after they have seen a man they regard as their spokesman and exemplar sacrificed for a party money-raiser.

There will be a practical consequence—big contributions for the 1946 and 1948 campaigns will be harder to get. Party solicitors and past contributors will be reluctant to mention large sums, regardless of Pauley's repeated denials of "contingent contributions."

Immediate Consequences. There will be several immediate political consequences of Ickes' resignation. Truman, already under pressure from Senators who do not want to undergo a public roll-call on the Pauley nomination, could withdraw the name with the explanation that he was doing so at Pauley's insistence. This would be a relief to those Democratic senatorial candidates this year who are in the Navy second in line to whom the President and in 1948 to whom the President and Democratic National Chairman Hannegan have been applying the heat.

To do this, however, Truman would be acting out of character and would be violating the code in the professional politicians who make a fetish of sticking by their original appointments. City politicians understand this, just as they understand Truman's announcement on the indictment of Pauley. They understand that he would "not desert a sinking ship."

Another consequence will be that if Pauley is unexpectedly confirmed by the Senate he is not likely to get the Navy second ship which James Forrestal resigns. If Truman insisted on promoting him, the present controversy would be revived, perhaps with greater intensity. It was with deliberate purpose that Ickes recalled in his letter that the Republican party was "spiritually wrecked in the days of Secretary Fall long before its debacle in 1932."

An ironical consequence will stem from the fact that the old New Dealer's resignation came just at the time when Chairman Hannegan was making every effort to get the bright New Dealers back into the Government and into the Democratic party. It was perhaps with malicious intent that Ickes mentioned the "inspiring experience" he had had during "the 12 years of the great adventure" in the Roosevelt cabinet. And he slyly remarked at his press conference that Truman had made some "regrettable appointments," and noted that he had used the plural. Although he mentioned

"the resignation must be considered a real loss to the President personally and politically and to government as well. It removes a man who has outstandingly fulfilled allied functions of gadfly and guardian of public interest. Mr. Ickes' integrity has become proverbial."

The San Francisco Chronicle comments that the Secretary's "integrity, courage and independence were never more clearly shown than in his resignation."

The Philadelphia Inquirer said that Ickes "told off the President in a professional manner that would have astonished the late Gen. Hugh Johnson, a wordslinger of no mean ability—yet we can't help feeling that Mr. Truman let himself in for the Ickesian tirade."

The Atlanta Constitution said the resignation "serves as a sad commentary on the degree to which petty partisan politics have come to hamper and hamstring good government."

The Times Dispatch, at Richmond, Va., asserted Ickes' resignation was "likely to become an historical document and may have important repercussions in the congressional campaigns this year, and in the next presidential election."

The Portland (Ore.) Journal said that President Truman had erred, and that "the exchange of a good administrator for an oil-smearer appointee (who may not be confirmed) sets him back both ways, and not only him, but his administration and the nation."

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette said "the President is backing a candidate of dubious qualifications and whose confirmation seems unlikely, at the expense of public confidence."

The Miami Herald—"Even his enemies will applaud him (Ickes) for his stand."

President Truman was warned by persons outside the Government against making the Pauley appointment, even though Ickes felt that he could not "trust his unasked advice on the President of the United States."

The President insisted on paying a political debt. He incurred a political liability which is likely to remain throughout his administration, however long that may be.

Portas, one of the original "brain trusters" in the Roosevelt administration, is expected to corroborate Ickes' sworn testimony, documented by diary notes, that in September 1944 Pauley told him $300,000 could be raised in campaign funds from California oil men if they could be assured that the Federal Government would not try to assert title to oil-land tidelands off California.

The alleged conversation between Ickes and Pauley was first published exclusively in the Post-Dispatch on Oct. 23 of last year.

TRUMAN LOOKING FOR 'RIGHT MAN' TO REPLACE ICKES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—

President Truman today tackled the job of finding the "right man" to take the place of Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who resigned as a result of Truman's nomination of Edwin W. Pauley, California oil man, for Under Secretary of the Navy.

Truman summoned western members of Congress to the White House and discussed the situation with them. Those called to the White House, all Democrats, included House Speaker Rayburn of Texas, Representative Compton of Idaho, and Senators Wheeler of Montana, Hatch of New Mexico, O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Thomas and Murdock of Utah.

Hatch, chairman of the Senate Public Lands Committee, said after his call that he had discussed "several men" with Truman, adding: "The President is reaching for the right man."

Abe Fortas, former Under Secretary of the Interior, disclosed today he had been subpoenaed to testify Tuesday at the Senate Naval Affairs Committee hearing on Pauley's nomination. Ickes has testified that Fortas was present at the time Pauley allegedly discussed Democratic campaign funds with him.

Fortas, one of the original "brain trusters" in the Roosevelt administration, is expected to corroborate Ickes' sworn testimony, documented by diary notes, that in September 1944 Pauley told him $300,000 could be raised in campaign funds from California oil men if they could be assured that the Federal Government would not try to assert title to oil-land tidelands off California.

NAVY PLAN CALLS FOR 33 U. S. BASES IN THE PACIFIC, 20 IN ATLANTIC

Nimitz in Outlining Program to Senators Says Carrier Fleets Are Most Likely to Parry Atomic Blows.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, chief of naval operations, said today the Navy's carrier fleet may make any atomic air attack on this country "very difficult."

Submarines hold promise of becoming "the most successful vehicle for carrying atomic weapons to within short distances of coastal targets," he told the Senate Naval Committee in presenting the Navy's recommendations for the postwar fleet.

Nimitz brought with him charts which showed plans for:

A system of 53 overseas bases for ships and planes—23 in the Pacific and 20 in the Atlantic-Caribbean area.

A Navy manned, afloat and ashore, by 500,000 enlisted men and 58,000 officers.

An active fleet of 319 combatant vessels, part of a total fleet of 1075 including reserve and laid-up ships distributed in the two oceans.

List of Proposed Bases.

The charts on the proposed strategic bases showed:

In the Pacific—Pearl Harbor to be the main naval base. A major operating base in the Guam-Saipan area of the Marianas. Another major operating base, but on only a caretaker basis, at Manus island, off New Guinea, this dependent on agreement with Australia.

Secondary operating bases in the Ryukyu islands, the Philippines, at Samoa in the far southwest Pacific, at vital Midway island, and at Kodiak, Dutch Harbor and Attu in the Aleutians. Air bases, air fields and fleet anchorages distributed through this broad pattern. Retention of Balboa, at the Pacific end of the Panama Canal, as a submarine base.

In the Atlantic-Caribbean Area—Roosevelt Roads, in the Puerto Rico area, intended as the main operating base when fully developed. Secondary operating and repair bases at Guantanamo and Trinidad, the latter one of the 99-year leases from Britain. Secondary operating bases (not including repairs) at San Juan, Puerto Rico, Cocos Solo, on the Atlantic end of the Panama Canal, Bermuda and Argentina, Newfoundland, the latter two also 99-year lease.

A submarine base on caretaker status is planned for St. Thomas, in the Virgin Islands, also leased from Britain. As in the Pacific, air bases and air strips are spotted at strategic points.

Foremost Vulnerable.

Appearing before Nimitz was heard, Secretary of the Navy Forrester told the Senate Committee the United States must be in readiness to spread its line of advanced outposts to meet the threat of the atomic bomb and robot missiles. The time has not yet come when war can be waged without the transportation of men and materials overseas, he said.

"Security against air attack can only be achieved by denying to our potential enemies the base areas from which mass air attacks can be launched against us."

He said that, until the United Nations proves that it can outlaw the use of the atomic bomb, this country must keep its military establishment strong.

Ships Less Vulnerable.

Nimitz declared that ships, while vulnerable together with armies and cities, "are difficult and unprofitable targets for atomic bombing and almost impossible targets for super rockets."

"The ability of our carrier task forces to prevent penetration by hostile aircraft may make atomic bombings very difficult," he asserted.

"The submarine may be expected to have continued and increased employment in the future. At sea it is relatively immune to atomic bombing and also to radar detection. It may be the most successful vehicle for carrying atomic weapons to within short distances of coastal targets and for insuring accuracy in the use of guided missiles."

Air Bases Key in Future.

Future warfare, Nimitz said, "may for us resolve itself largely into a struggle for the possession of air bases—bases from which an enemy might bomb us effectively and from which we might effectively bomb the enemy."

The fundamental purpose of naval operations will continue to be the defeat of our enemies at the greatest possible distance from our own shores."

Military, naval and diplomatic chiefs gave to President Truman yesterday their ideas on how the atom bomb-warship tests should be conducted. The White House meeting was attended by Secretary of War Patterson, Secretary of Navy Forrester, Secretary of State B. H. H. and three of the four members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff—Adm. William D. Leahy, the President's chief of staff; Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Adm. Nimitz.

The Navy will assign its crack salvage crews to rush repairs on target ships damaged in the first atomic bomb test so they can be blasted again in the second.

Acting under specific orders from the joint chiefs of staff, the task force has arranged what it hopes will be a program of gradual destruction, ranging from negligible damage up to destruction.

ART MUSEUM BUYS OIL PORTRAIT OF D. R. FITZPATRICK

Painting of Cartoonist by Wallace H. Smith to Be Exhibited in East.

The City Art Museum has purchased the oil portrait of Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, Post-Dispatch cartoonist, which was reproduced on the cover of last Sunday's PICTURES section of the Post-Dispatch.

The portrait was painted by Wallace Herndon Smith, St. Louis artist, and shows Fitzpatrick at his drawing board. Merritt S. Hitt, museum secretary, said the portrait will not go on display in St. Louis until after it has been exhibited in the Associated American Artists Galleries in New York in April. The New York show will be a joint exhibition of the works of Smith and Fitzpatrick.

Hitt said a later announcement will be made when the portrait will be hung at the City Art Museum in St. Louis.

The Art Museum secretary said the portrait was purchased with income from the McMillan fund, a private endowment for the purchase for the Art Museum of the work of contemporary American artists. Selection of the portrait, Hitt said, was made by the museum board of directors.

MARINE CORPS, NAVY REDUCE DISCHARGE SCORES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Marine Corps and the Navy today ordered further reductions in discharge scores, making an estimated 183,300 eligible for release.

The marine score for male officers and enlisted men will drop from 45 to 42 on March 1, opening the way for the discharge of 16,000. No change was announced for women marines.

Effective April 15 and May 2, navy point requirements will be lowered to let out 13,800 officers and 153,500 enlisted personnel.

V. Adm. Louis Denfield, chief of naval personnel, said in a statement this would mean that by May 2 approximately 70 per cent of personnel subject to demobilization would be back in civilian life.

The point reductions will be as follows:

Male commissioned and warrant officers, from 37 to 36 on April 15 and to 35 on May 2.

Male enlisted personnel, from 30 to 29 on April 15, and to 28 on May 2.

WAVE officers, from 26 to 25 on May 2.

WAVE enlisted personnel, from 20 to 19 on May 2.

Navy Nurse Corps, from 26 to 25 on May 2.

Exceptions are made in several categories, including:

Male doctors decrease from 47 to 46 on April 15 and to 44 on May 2.

Naval aviators in flight status above rank of ensign decrease from 24 to 23 on April 15 and to 22 on May 2.

Naval aviators, ensign, flight status, unchanged, at 20.

CITY TO FILE PLEA TO DISMISS POLICEMEN'S UNION INJUNCTION

A motion to dismiss the injunction suit brought by the policemen's union to prevent enforcement of the department rule which prohibits unionization of police personnel will be filed Saturday in Circuit Court, Associate City Counselor James V. Frank announced today.

Previously it was planned to file an answer to the union's suit, Frank said, but this plan was changed following a conference with State Attorney General J. E. Taylor. Frank said the purpose of the motion to dismiss was to get the case before the Missouri Supreme Court as rapidly as possible for determination of the legal right of policemen to join a union. Whatever the ruling of the lower court, Frank said he thought the action would be appealed.

FOUR MORE ENGLISH BRIDES LEAVING TO JOIN ST. LOUISANS

Three Wives of Veterans Here to Arrive in New York Saturday.

Four English war brides of St. Louis soldiers were among 1200 dependents of American service men scheduled to sail on the Washington from England today.

Three English wives of St. Louisans are due to arrive in New York Saturday aboard the Santa Paula with 394 other brides and children, the Associated Press reported.

LOTTERY RECORDS SEIZED IN RAID AFTER ARRESTS

Link With 'Policy King' Found Among Papers—County Prosecutor to Get Evidence.

Charles F. Goettmann, in whose home Sheriff Arthur Mosley and deputies seized policy game materials and records yesterday, was released today on $2000 bond pending presentation of the evidence to St. Louis county prosecuting authorities in an application for a gambling warrant. The appearance bond is returnable at the sheriff's office Feb. 25.

Goettmann was arrested earlier yesterday by members of the police gambling squad and the county officers after they observed him handling policy tickets and cash with three Negroes in front of 1116 Missouri avenue. He accompanied the officers, who had a search warrant, to his home, 10018 Marlene drive, Afton, where four rubber stamping sets, rubber type, paper for policy sheets and books and records were seized.

One record, purported to be a copy of Goettmann's 1944 income tax return, listed his employer as "Stephenson, 6007 South Kingshighway." Police say that Andrew T. Stephenson, former city detective known to the gambling squad as the "policy king of St. Louis," resides at the Kingshighway address.

Deputies said Goettmann told them he worked for Stephenson in 1944 "cutting paper," but denied having policy game connections with Stephenson.

Stephenson and nine others were indicted by the St. Louis grand jury in January 1940 on charges of establishing a lottery. The indictments were dismissed in February 1941 on recommendation of the circuit attorney's office, which announced that the State had been unable to find an important witness.

The Negroes arrested with Goettmann gave names as Joe Stephens, 2301 Franklin avenue; Alvert Williams, 1100 North Leffingwell avenue, and Henry Lewis, 2906A Chouteau avenue. All were booked suspected of establishing a lottery and the Negroes were released on bond.

Police said the arrests followed a 10-day surveillance of the neighborhood at Missouri avenue and Hickory street during which they observed Goettmann make three trips daily to the intersection to distribute tickets and collect from policy salesmen.

Chief of Detectives Herman Siebels told reporters today that detectives had observed the activities of Goettmann and policy writers for several months in an effort to establish evidence of a connection with Stephenson. The so-called "policy king" is seen frequently in police court when policy writers are docketed for hearings.

A three-man commission appointed by the United States conciliation service to attempt to settle the dispute held separate conferences with union and management representatives yesterday, and then brought the disputants together, but "no progress at all" on wages, the key issue, was reported.

Dropping the wage question for the time being, the conciliators took up side issues today. Conciliation efforts will be suspended next week, to be resumed after the union conference in Memphis. The conciliation commission is made up of Anthony Johnson, John E. Pennell and Monroe Sheehan, conciliation service agents.

PREWAR GARBAGE COLLECTION

The prewar system of collecting garbage in Richmond Heights has been renewed and residents no longer will have to place their garbage containers at the curb.

Announcements of the change, printed in circular form, were left on garbage containers throughout the city, but recent high winds apparently blew them away, collection officials said, for garbage is still being placed at the curb by some. Collections during the remainder of the winter will be made once a week. In the summer collections will be made twice a week.

PHONE WALKOUT THREAT GROWS AS NEGOTIATIONS LAG

Union Calls Strategy Conference to Discuss Nation-Wide Strike in Wage Dispute.

The possibility of a nation-wide telephone strike was raised today when officials of the independent Southwestern Telephone Workers' Union reported "no progress" by federal conciliators toward settlement of a wage dispute and announced they would confer with representatives of telephone workers in other parts of the country to study the advisability of strike action.

All locals of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, which covers every section of the United States except New England, will send representatives to a meeting in Memphis Monday. Union strategy will be formulated at the meeting, expected to last most of the week. If strike action is deemed necessary, dates for a strike ballot and a subsequent work stoppage will be set.

The Southwestern local represents 35,000 employees of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. A strike by this group would disrupt local and long distance service in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and the part of Illinois adjacent to St. Louis.

Wage Disputes Elsewhere. Inasmuch as a number of other locals are experiencing the same difficulty as the Southwestern group in settling wage disputes, a strike would not be confined to this region, it was pointed out.

Union officials said the Long Lines Federation of Telephone Workers, in which long distance operators of 42 states are enrolled, is one of the groups which thus far has been unable to reach an agreement with management.

The Southwestern workers are seeking wage increases averaging $7 a week and reduction in the periods required to reach top minimum salaries. The company has submitted a wage adjustment offer, details of which have not been disclosed. D. L. McCowen, president of the local, said it constituted an increase of 10 per cent, compared to a 15 per cent rise granted some locals in other parts of the country.

The union's bargaining committee already has approved a strike vote for some time after Feb. 21, when the 30-day "cooling off" period required by the National Labor Relations Board expires.

Conciliation Attempt. A three-man commission appointed by the United States conciliation service to attempt to settle the dispute held separate conferences with union and management representatives yesterday, and then brought the disputants together, but "no progress at all" on wages, the key issue, was reported.

Dropping the wage question for the time being, the conciliators took up side issues today. Conciliation efforts will be suspended next week, to be resumed after the union conference in Memphis. ## 65C MINIMUM PAY BILL APPROVED BY SENATE GROUP

4,000,000 to 6,000,000
More Workers Covered
—Exemption for Small Businesses.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Senate Labor Committee today approved legislation to fix a 65-cent-an-hour minimum wage and provide a broad expansion of coverage.

Chairman Murray (Dem.), Montana, said there was no record vote on the committee's action to put most retail, wholesale and service businesses under the act, with the minimum increased from 40 to 65 cents.

Senator Pepper (Dem.), Florida, sponsor of the measure for expanded coverage, explained that it would give the present wage act the same scope as that now existing under the National Labor Relations Act. The law now covers businesses engaged in interstate commerce.

Pepper estimated that from 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 additional workers in large department stores, wholesale establishments and chain business operations would come under the minimum wage provision. He explained that the only exemptions would be "the small corner grocery store and the little business."

Pepper said the exemption would apply to any business doing less than $500,000 in annual gross volume, or having four or less units. He said any business with five or more units, such as stores or other outlets, would come under the proposal even if it did less than $500,000 gross volume a year. The committee left unchanged a proposal to increase minimum wages from the present 40-cent level to 65 cents. This would increase after two years to 70 cents and then go up after two years to 75 cents.

Murray said that some 21,000,000 workers were covered by provisions of the present Fair Labor Standards Act, although most of them now receive 65 cents an hour or more.

USED AS WRESTLING PARTNER, MARS HEIRESS GETS DIVORCE

CHICAGO, Feb. 14 (AP)—Patricia Mars Feeney, 31 years old, heiress to the Mars candy fortune, won a divorce in superior court yesterday. She testified her husband used her to demonstrate a wrestler's scissors hold and airplane spin.

The divorce from M. Alan Feeney was granted on ground of cruelty. Feeney was not in court. Mrs. Feeney testified while she and her husband were playfully wrestling one evening after dinner, she "jokingly told him I was stronger than he was." She said he "got a scissors hold around my waist" and squeezed her until she was bruised. On another occasion, Mrs. Feeney testified, her husband showed her an airplane spin despite her protests.

CONFERENCE ON ENFORCEMENT OF SANITATION ORDINANCES

A conference to discuss enforcement and strengthening of ordinances governing garbage collection, refused disposal and other sanitation measures will be held Monday afternoon at City Hall. Heads of all municipal departments concerned with municipal sanitation and cleanliness have been invited.

The decision to call the conference was reached yesterday after a discussion between City Counselor George L. Stemmler and Chief of Police James J. Mitchell about means to enforce sanitation ordinances.

Others who will attend the conference are Director of Public Welfare Henry S. Caulfield; Health Commissioner Joseph H. Bredeck; Director of Streets and Sewers Arthur C. Meyers; City Judges George J. Grellner and Joseph B. Catanzaro; Assistant City Counselors Roy A. Fish and Cletus A. Rudolph and Frank E. Lawrence Jr., secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, who is chairman of the Citizens' Rat Elimination Committee.

GREAT-GRANDSON OF KAISER GETS TWO MONTHS IN JAIL

JEVER, Germany, Feb. 14 (AP)—Prince Karl Anton von Hohenzollern, 19 years old, great-grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm, was sentenced by a Canadian Military Government court today to two months in jail for failing to report possession of quantities of radio and telephone equipment.

MRS. PHIL BALL LEFT $15,000 TO LATE HUSBAND'S SECRETARY

Miss Ella Jacoby, for more than 20 years personal secretary to Philip DeCatesby Ball, will receive $15,000 under terms of Mrs. Ball's will, filed yesterday in probate court. Another business associate, the late Louis E. von Weise, was bequeathed $5000.

Mrs. Ball, who died Jan. 1 at the age of 79, left an estate valued at approximately $500,000. An inventory listed $308,830 in bonds, corporation stock with a market value of $155,322, and $82,828 in cash. Her husband, who was an ice machinery manufacturer and owner of the St. Louis Browns, died in 1935. The bulk of the estate was left in trust for a son, James P. Ball, Reno, Nev.; a daughter, Mrs. William R. Cady, 5915 Lindell boulevard, and a grandson, Francis E. Nulsen, Framingham, Mass. Miss Jacoby, who is now secretary treasurer of the Essex Investment Co. in Clayton, and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. were named co-executors.

TRAFFIC IN CITY, COUNTY SLOWED BY SNOW, SLEET

Streetcars, Busses and Trains Delayed—Man Killed, Another Hurt
in Accidents.

Traffic in St. Louis and the county was delayed considerably today as snow and sleet, which fell in the area for nine hours last night, turned to ice on streets and highways. The Government weather bureau predicted fair weather, but a drop in temperatures to as low as 15 degrees tomorrow morning.

City street maintenance crews spread cinders and salt on the Express Highway, which was closed at 9 o'clock last night and opened at 6 o'clock today. Similar crews of the Public Service Co. worked throughout the night on bus routes. A company spokesman said automobile traffic apparently was holding up streetcars and busses, keeping them slightly behind schedule.

Most of the railroad trains due in the city this morning were running five to 30 minutes late, an official at Union Station said. Airline traffic, which was halted at 6 p.m., yesterday, was resumed about midnight after a heavy fog lifted. Visibility today was reported to be 10 miles.

Snow started falling in the city at about 6 o'clock last night. It followed an all-day rain, which changed to sleet shortly after 5 p.m. In the city the snow reached an average depth of 1.6 inches and at Lambert-St. Louis Field the weather station reported three inches of snow. The average wind velocity during the storm was 25 miles an hour, with gusts reaching a velocity of 35 miles an hour.

The low temperature for the last 24 hours was 22 degrees at 7 o'clock today.

Although most motorists drove slowly and cautiously, numerous skidding accidents were reported to police of the accident in East St. Louis and another was seriously injured in a collision of a truck and three automobiles in East St. Louis.

Robert Semke, a chemist of 109 Willette terrace, Lemay, was killed when an automobile he was driving collided with another at Gravois avenue and River Des Peres Parkway and skidded against a tree at 1:50 a.m. Porter J. McDama, 8119 Basil drive, Affton, who is employed as a civilian fireman at Jefferson Barracks, was the driver of the other car. He told police he saw Semke's car coming out of the parkway, but could not tell whether it was skidding. He said his car skidded against the side of Semke's when he applied his brakes in an effort to avoid the collision. Semke, who was 26 years old, was pronounced dead at City Hospital.

John Schutzenhofer, foreman on the night shift at the Aluminum Ore Co., East St. Louis, suffered skull injuries and a fractured left leg in the collision in East St. Louis at 7:30 a.m. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital.

Police said Schutzenhofer's automobile was struck head-on by a skidding truck that had sideswiped another automobile as it left the railroad overhead in the 4200 block of St. Clair avenue. A third automobile skidded and sideswiped the truck after it had struck Schutzenhofer's car. The Missouri State Highway Patrol reported that roads throughout the state, with the exception of those in the northwest portion, are ice covered and dangerous for motor travel.

SIX LOST WHEN BARGE SINKS

BOSTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Six members of a crew of eight perished today when the barge Lake Crystal sank three miles off Watch Hill, R.I. One crewman was rescued and another was missing.

The New York tug Nottingham was towing the barge when it foundered. Several Coast Guard craft and a patrol plane assisted the Nottingham in an effort to save the barge's crew.

BELGIAN WOMAN DECORATED BY BRITISH FOR AID TO ALLIES

LONDON, Feb. 14 (AP)—King George VI last night awarded Britain's highest civilian decoration—the George Medal—to Miss Andree de Jongh, 25 years old, of Belgium, for refusing to talk under Gestapo torture and for dangerous feats to help downed Allied airmen through enemy lines.

"From 1941 to her arrest in 1943," the citation said, "she organized the dispatch of these Allied service personnel," crossing mountains in all weather and swimming the Somme river "no less than 20 times." After her arrest, she refused to reveal her underground contacts, despite the Nazis' "third degree."

TWO MEN KILLED IN COLLISION OF TRAIN AND AUTO

Another Man in Machine Injured Seriously—Accident Occurs in Petersburg Station.

Two employees of the Midwest Rubber Reclaiming Co., East St. Louis, were killed and a third man seriously injured early today when their automobile in which they were riding to work collided with a Baltimore & Ohio train at a crossing in Petersburg Station, a half mile west of O'Fallon.

Those killed were Roy M. Schildknecht, 26 years old, and Robert Lilly, 50, both of O'Fallon. James Titter, 57, a mineworker, of O'Fallon, was injured and was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Belleville, suffering from a crushed chest and possible fractures of the back, leg and skull.

The automobile driven by Titter was demolished and dragged for some distance by the train, which was westbound. The accident occurred at 7:15 a.m.

Schildknecht, a war veteran, was married two weeks ago to Miss Dorothy Dressel of O'Fallon.

GAINS BY NEGROES ON INDUSTRY JOBS IN WAR RELATED

Made Greater Strides Than in Preceding 85 Years, Dr. R. C. Weaver Tells Institute.

Acceptance of Negroes in industrial occupations increased more in World War II than in the preceding 85 years, Dr. Robert C. Weaver of Chicago, a member of the American Council on Race Relations, told representatives of St. Louis civic organizations, attending the Community Race Relations Institute of Greater St. Louis, at Metropolitan Y.W.C.A. today.

Most of the gains made by Negroes along the lines of occupational diversification occurred after 1942, Dr. Weaver said. When the defense program started the Negro was on the sidelines of American industrial life, where he had been since the first World War, the speaker continued.

As the war continued there was some breakdown in the color caste system in industry and there was even some acceptance of Negro women in industrial employment, he said. Vocational training also was made available to Negroes in many sections of the country.

Mostly in Unskilled Jobs. "Despite these gains, Negroes are still concentrated in heavy industry and unskilled jobs," Dr. Weaver asserted. "The economic fate of the Negro has never been and will never be dissociated from that of all the labor of the nation."

The theme of today's institute sessions was "Race Relations and Earning a Living." Thirty-four social, civic, labor and religious organizations are represented at the meetings, which began Tuesday night and will end at a mass meeting Sunday afternoon at Soldan High School. The objective of the institute is to develop a program for more harmonious race relations between racial and religious groups in this area.

FEPC Member Speaks. Miss Sara E. Southall of Chicago, assistant personnel manager of International Harvester Co. and a member of the national Fair Employment Practices Committee, addressing a luncheon meeting at Bishop Tuttle Memorial, urged business and labor leaders to take the initiative in establishing democratic employment practices in industry.

The first step, she said, is for management to make a clear statement of its non-discriminatory position. But policy must be followed through by education of supervisory personnel at every level, with co-operation between management and the collective bargaining agency, she added. Segregation of minority groups within industry is not only undemocratic but uneconomical, she declared.

Another speaker today, Herbert M. Ramel, vice president of Ramsey Accessories Manufacturing Corp. and a member of the Mayor's Race Relations Commission, declared that owners and managers of industrial plants should make a real effort to integrate Negro workers with a minimum of friction.

Successful in Many Plants. "This has been done successfully in many plants, and their experiences should be studied," Ramel said. "Whenever an employer decides to hire or upgrade a Negro, he should inform the union and the foreman and ask their full co-operation."

"Colored leaders are not satisfied simply with employment of some colored people. They, essentially, want an end to segregation in all phases; complete economic equality is their goal. Elements most urgently needed are teamwork and moderation on both sides; these can be brought about by tolerance and understanding. If the movement goes too far too fast it most certainly will have violent reactions, perhaps wiping out many of the gains of the past years."

The theme of yesterday's sessions was "Race Relations and Community Adjustment." Separate groups discussed, respectively, housing, health and community organization.

Miss Jane K. Dickey, Y.W.C.A. executive director, reporting for the group discussing community organization, strongly recommended that the institute be established on a permanent basis, with a broadened program directed at breaking down all racial discrimination.

Dr. Sylvester Speaks. The housing group agreed that segregation should be wiped out, not only in public housing but in restrictions governing ownership of homes throughout the city, the Rev. Dr. E. Paul Sylvester, pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, and group chairman, reported.

Dr. A. N. Vaughn, physician and chairman of the group discussing health, said that the total of 900 hospital beds available to Negroes in the city was far below requirement.

2 FINED ON LOTTERY CHARGE

Otis W. Lee, 2509 Remington lane, Rock Hill, and Arrie Nelson, Negro, 2800 Locust street, were fined $25 each today by Police Judge Joseph B. Catanzaro on a charge of establishing a lottery.

They were arrested as they stepped from an automobile at Tower Grove and Chouteau avenues last Jan. 14 carrying a bundle containing policy sheets, top sheets and other policy-writing equipment.

To Quit Johns Hopkins Staff. BALTIMORE, Feb. 14 (AP)—The retirement of Dr. Edwards A. Park, 68 years old, internationally known for his work in children's diseases and professor of pediatrics at Johns Hopkins medical school, was announced yesterday by Dr. Isiah Bowman, Hopkins president. He will be succeeded as professor of pediatrics at the medical school and pediatrician in chief at Johns Hopkins hospital by Dr. Francis F. Schwentker, who at 42 years old, is a leading authority on infectious diseases. Dr. Park's retirement is effective July 1. Dr. Schwentker discovered a method of obtaining immunity for psittacosis, or parrot fever.

HEARING ON GEORGIA RAIL SUIT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Georgia's anti-trust suit against 20 railways will open before Special Master Lloyd K. Garrison here March 18.
Attorney General J. Eugene Cook of Georgia announced the date and said the state will be given 10 days to present its case. Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia instituted suit against the railways charging conspiracy to fix rates unfair to the South. Garrison, a former War Labor Board chairman, was named a special master by the Supreme Court to hear the case and make recommendations.

45 REPORTED DEAD IN CALCUTTA; CITY QUIET AFTER RIOTS

400 Injured — 19 Yanks Hurt When Evacuation Convoy Is Attacked by Mob.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 14 (AP)—Uneasy quiet hung over Calcutta today after three days of widespread anti-British demonstrations in which, unconfirmed reports said, 45 persons were killed and nearly 400 injured.

Strong British military detachments continued to patrol the city, where 13 were killed and more than 150 hurt yesterday in repeated clashes between military forces and mobs which appeared bent on destroying anything connected with the government.

Transportation remained at a standstill this morning. Telegraph, telephone and postal operations were seriously affected. European shops, many of which were damaged and looted Tuesday, remained closed in most sections. Two post offices have been looted.

A nauseating stench hung over many areas as garbage piled up because of interrupted collection service.

The All-India Congress party, the Moslem League and the Communist party sent "peace squads" into disturbed areas last night. After a midnight tour they expressed the opinion the situation would improve, although their automobiles were attacked by mobs.

U. S. Troops Evacuated.
A thousand American troops on leave in Calcutta were evacuated for safety after five officers and 13 enlisted men were injured early in the disturbances, which resulted from a protest against the sentencing of a Moslem officer of the Japanese-sponsored "Indian National Army."

Nineteen additional American casualties were reported last night, when a convoy of 800 homeward-bound G.I.s was showered with bricks and a rail tie dropped from an overhead bridge near Kanchrapara. All except Pfc. Max B. Benton of Tabor City, N. C., who suffered concussions, were able to board the Seattle-bound Marine Angel.

Two civilian police sergeants have been missing since yesterday. Search parties have been unable to find a trace of them.

A mob estimated at 400 persons attacked the Methodist church, overwhelming a police detachment and forcing its way into the building. It set fire to the altar, smashed furniture and religious fittings and tore up hymnals. Other mobs attacked Gurkha troops employed by the British.

Service on both the Bengal-Assam and East Indian railways was disrupted by crowds on the tracks. Yesterday's casualties included four dead and 14 injured at a town 28 miles south of Calcutta, where police fired on a crowd blocking a train.

Cardinal Glennon's Party in Rome

Jose M. Rodriguez of Santiago, Chile; Archbishop Juan Gualberto Guervara of Lima, Peru; and Bishop Antonio Caggiano of Rosario, Argentina.

Cardinal Stritch, at a press conference after leaving the Vatican, said he was "delighted to see the Holy Father looking so well," and that the Pope's "keen appreciation of the problems which beset the world is really amazing. He seems to know so well the affairs of our country." He last saw the Pope when the latter, then Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, visited the United States in 1936. Archbishop Stritch then headed the Archdiocese of Milwaukee. Earlier, as a student in Rome, he learned to speak Italian and still has some use of that language. For most of the guests, not the least important appointments are those made with the ecclesiastical tailor. This worthy, outfitting the participants in Rome's most memorable rites of this century, will be on his mettle to see that Cardinal Glennon and his colleagues are groomed in princely style in the dazzling red accoutrements of their new rank.

Their costumes include the three-cornered hat, or biretta; the soutane, or cassock; sumptuous footgear to match; and the regal cappa magna, or robe of state, with train 25 feet long. A scarlet zucchetto, or skullcap, is also worn.

At next Monday's secret consistory, in the consistorial hall of the Vatican palace, the Pope will announce the elevation of the 32 new Cardinals, the largest number ever created—this is the second time. At two other consistories, in 1917 and 1918, 31 were created; and in 1935, by Pope Pius XI, 18, the largest number in recent times.

Next Wednesday afternoon, at a semi-public consistory in the Hall of Benediction, over the entrance to St. Peter's Church, Pope Pius XII will bestow scarlet birettas on 30 of the 32 new Cardinals. The Archbishops of Toulouse, France, and Utrecht, Netherlands, are too ill to come to Rome, and Papal messengers will be sent to their homes to deliver their birettas. They will be expected to come to Rome later for other ceremonial details.

On this occasion the Holy Father will present to each new Cardinal a ring engraved with the Papal coat of arms, and containing relics of saints. Friday of next week there will be a second secret assembly, also in the consistorial hall, at which the Pope will announce the Roman parishes of which the new Cardinals will become titular priests.

These assignments, as to the Americans, have already been made known. Cardinal Glennon's titular church will be the ancient St. Clemente, held by some scholars to be the oldest Christian shrine in Rome, and dating, as to its lower portion, from the fifth century; the upper church is of the twelfth century. The allotment of San Clemente to the St. Louis archbishop is the more appropriate in that it is known as the "Irish church," having been for nearly a century past in charge of Irish Dominican priests. Abbot Mulhooly of the Dominicans caused the excavating of the lower church, with its treasures of ecclesiastical art, after it had been buried for centuries. The late William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, was the last titular pastor of this church.

Cardinal Spellman's titular parish will be that of Saints John and Paul, which was held previously by Cardinal Pacelli, the present Pope; significance is attached to this assignment by many. Cardinal Stritch will have the Church of St. Agnes Outside the Walls, and Cardinal Mooney St. Susanna's.

At one of the two secret consistories, the Pope will request the approbation of the Sacred College for four proposed new canonizations.

In Underground Precincts. From vaulted roof to crypt, St. Peter's was humming like a beehive today with preparations for the public consistory. Down the central aisle leading to the main altar, carpenters were installing long tiers of elevated platforms, or tribunes, for the accommodation of favored spectators, of whom each Cardinal may invite fifty. At the top of giddy scaffolds, sculptors were setting in place statues of the four prospective new saints.

Admission was refused to the vault containing the relics of St. Peter and St. Paul which lie beneath the Pope's private altar at the center of the fane and the giant canopy of bronze which overroofs it. Workmen were busy also in these hallowed underground precincts.

But all was quiet in the church bar. Yes, St. Peter's has a bar, at which priests may refresh themselves not only with coffee and rolls, but with wines and spirits. On the shelves was a goody array of bottles, and on the wall were gaudy posters in colors, picturing brands of cognac and rum.

The treasure room was crowded with spectators, who gaped at its untold wealth of jewels and goldsmithery, the pious accumulation of tens of centuries.

Majority of Non-Italians. The Italian people were by no means overjoyed by the Pope's announcement of his decision shattering a precedent of 2000 years to reconstitute the Sacred College so that for the first time it would have a majority of non-Italians. Thus the Roman faith will become more than ever before the Church Universal. There will be 69 Cardinals, of whom 42 will be "foreigners" and only 27 will be Italians.

In remote times England, Germany, Spain and France supplied a handful of Popes. With shrines of resignation, the Italians are preparing themselves for another "foreign" Pope. They believe that this time he will be an American. They are even sure of his name. It is Francis J. Spellman.

Cost of Clothing and Shoes. It may have been a symptom of the general resentment—the announcement by the ecclesiastical tailor that he would have to charge one million lire to outfit a cardinal, and that, anyway, with as many as 32, there would naturally be a shortage of materials. He requires a particular fabric of red watered silk which is available only in Germany, the world's specialist in dyestuffs. The Vatican let it be known that it was ready to dress the new cardinals itself, whereupon the price was cut to 600,000 lire, and it was discovered that materials were plentiful.

But a cardinal's red shoes still cost 350,000 lire, or at the new devalued rate, nearly 800,000. At the exchange enforced by the Army finance office, that would represent about $350.

Cardinal "Sells" Detroit. Cardinal Mooney made it known, after his half-hour audience with the Pontiff, that he put in some words about his home city of Detroit during his interview. He says he is "always selling" the motor capital, and remarked: "If the Holy Father had not brought up the subject of Detroit, I would have done so." The Detroit prelate, former spiritual director of the American College in Rome, said he found the pope looking "surprisingly well indeed." He last saw the then Cardinal Pacelli eight years ago.

In high spirits as he left the Vatican, Cardinal Mooney noted that a photographer snapped him as he was adjusting the ribbon on his hat. Holding up a hand, he protested: "That was out of bounds. For that, I should be entitled to an extra toss," meaning a posed picture, which was then made.

Six bishops who arrived in the Stritch-Mooney plane are expected

BLIGHTED AREA BILL SUBSTITUTE APPROVED

Missouri House Group Retains Tax Relief Feature of Senate Measure.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 14—A substitute for the main housing bill to encourage life insurance companies to participate in clearance of blighted areas and construction of housing projects in St. Louis and Kansas City was recommended for passage today by the House Miscellaneous Provisions Committee.

The main feature of the original bill—that of affording partial tax relief to life insurance companies investing in urban redevelopment corporation projects—was retained. Speaker Howard Elliott, a member of the committee, said the changes made were to safeguard the public from possibilities of monopolistic use of the redevelopment corporations and to clear "some indefinite points in the measure as passed by the Senate."

The committee eliminated provisions for clearance of substandard or insanitary areas because "the terms were too broad and devoid of any accurate meaning." The measure now provides for clearance and reconstruction of blighted areas only. The committee provided that any earnings of a redevelopment corporation in excess of 8 per cent be used to reduce rents for tenants of the housing project or to pay taxes deferred under the partial tax relief provision.

Another new feature of the bill is a provision designed to speed formation of redevelopment corporations by permitting life insurance companies to form the corporations within five years of the bill's effective date without reincorporating.

Elliott explained that the five-year period was planned to speed formation of the corporations in the present housing crisis. The committee said the changes made had been in general recommended by legal representatives of St. Louis and Kansas City.

For 10 years after a housing project is begun, under provisions of the urban redevelopment corporations act, taxes would be paid only on the assessed valuation of the land at the time of acquisition. There would be no tax on buildings or improvements. For the next 15 years the tax would be on 50 per cent of the true value of the land and the improvements. After the total of 25 years of partial tax relief, the property would be subject to payment of all property taxes.

to be received by the Pope. They are: William Murphy, Saginaw, Mich.; Michael J. Reedy, Columbus, O.; Aloysius Muench, Fargo, N. D.; William D. O'Brien, auxiliary bishop of Chicago; James L. Griffin, Springfield, Ill., and William Adrian, Nashville, Tenn.

Plans were being completed for a big reception for the four new United States cardinals tentatively set for Feb. 23, after they receive their red hats. The reception will be held at the Clubhouse of the National Catholic Community Service, operated for the Allied forces since a few days after the liberation of Rome. Directors of the club said the event would be attended by the diplomatic representatives to the Holy See and representatives of the Italian Government, various embassies, and the United States Army and Navy.

3 ST. LOUISANS HURT IN AUTO COLLISION ON EAST SIDE

Three St. Louisans were injured last night when an automobile in which they were riding collided with another at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue, East St. Louis.

The injured were Mrs. Carmella Verde, 5133 Shaw avenue, who suffered a fractured pelvis and back injuries; Miss Josephine Caputa, 5212A Shaw avenue, fractured collarbone and pelvis injuries, and William Walsh, 202 West Loretta avenue, fractured ribs. They were passengers in a machine driven by Erich Essen, 2110 Ann avenue, who was uninjured.

The other machine was operated by Oscar Abernathy, Negro, 4313 Taylor avenue, East St. Louis, who suffered head injuries. The injured were treated at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

MISSING SKIER FOUND ALIVE; DISAPPEARED IN STORM FEB. 2

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif., Feb. 14 (AP)—William Jacobs, 26 years old, Boston skier missing since Feb. 2 in a Badger Pass snowstorm, has been found alive, the National Park Service reported yesterday.

Believing he was dead, the youth's parents, Col. and Mrs. Vincent H. Jacobs of Boston, had left the park. Col. Jacobs was adjutant general of the Eighth Air Force in the war.

Park rangers found Jacobs huddled in a tree. He was wrapped in blankets from a first aid cache. Jacobs was reported to be "in good condition although he has two frozen toes and is very hungry."

EXCURSION BOAT SENATOR FLOATS FREE AS RIVER RISES

The Streckfus excursion steamboat Senator, stranded on the Mississippi river levee near Eads Bridge since Jan. 23 when the river level fell suddenly, floated free at 1:30 a.m. today as the river rose three feet last night.

The vessel's wooden hull, though subjected to considerable strain as it rested high and dry on the levee, appeared to be undamaged today. A Streckfus officer commented, "The Lord certainly sent us one of the nicest Valentines we could have asked for when He sent that water down the river."

No immediate plans have been made for the boat which has been tied up since the first year of the war by reason of a shortage of licensed pilots, the officer said. The Senator was last used on the Ohio river between Cairo, Ill., and Pittsburgh, Pa.

MEAL PLANNING IS ALWAYS DIFFICULT

Planning meals day in and day out is tedious, at best... but with present day shortages it is even more trying. Maul's Barbecue Sauce has been an old standby in many kitchens. It pep's up dishes and gives them more appetizing flavor. It's economical. A little goes a long way.

The genuine, made after an old southern recipe, bears the signature of Louis Maul.

BUS CANCELLATION PERMIT

Two bus companies which transported employees of the Western Cartridge Co. plant at East Alton to and from outlying Illinois towns in the war were authorized today by the Illinois Commerce Commission to cease operations.

The authorization was given to the Greenville Bus Co., which operated busses between Greenville and the plant, and the Defense Workers' Transit Lines, which operated busses between the plant and Highland and Marine.

UNIVERSITY CITY STUDIES PLAN FOR HOUSING PROJECT

Emergency Development Similar to Clayton's Considered for Six-Acre Tract.

University City last night took steps to undertake an emergency housing program for war veterans similar to that started by Clayton, which has begun work on 32 housing units.

The University City Board of Aldermen authorized Mayor Matt C. Fogarty to investigate the possibility of purchasing prefabricated homes or quonset huts for erection on a six-acre tract the municipality owns along the Terminal Railroad right-of-way near Kempland avenue.

Funds for the program would be raised through public subscription. Mayor Fogarty said that if the six-acre development worked out satisfactorily additional units could be erected on a 33-acre city tract on Pennsylvania avenue adjacent to Heman Park.

University City also is planning to relax building regulations to permit private construction of 30 frame houses on the south side of Vernon avenue for one block on either side of Ferguson avenue.

Meanwhile, the city of St. Louis was proceeding with plans to erect permanent homes for veterans. Within 24 hours after announcement that work was to start soon on the first three units, applications to purchase the homes sight unseen were received from two former service men.

Sgt. Harvey Protzel, now staying with his wife, an expectant mother, in one room at 3908 Hartford street, appeared in person at the office of Milton M. Kinsey, president of the Board of Public Service, to obtain priority rating for permits have been received by Building Commissioner A. H. Baum. He said some persons might have rented rooms without being aware they are required to file an application and pay a $2 inspection fee to obtain a permit.

$21,000 for Polled Hereford Bull, MERCED, Calif., Feb. 14 (AP)—A new price record for polled Hereford cattle in this country was set here Tuesday with the sale of Leskan Tone, grand champion bull, to Homer Sanborn of Meridian, Calif., for $21,000. The bull was owned and exhibited by Kuhlmann & Nelson of North Platte, Neb.

MEMORIAL SERVICES SET FOR MRS. RALPH W. THAYER

Memorial services for Mrs. Ralph W. Thayer, executive secretary for Russian War Relief, Inc., will be conducted tomorrow at 4 p.m. at Christ Church Cathedral, 1210 Locust street, by Dean Sidney E. Sweet. The Vashon High School chorus will sing.

The services are sponsored by the St. Louis chapter of the League of Women Voters, of which Mrs. Thayer was a former vice president, by Russian War Relief, Inc., and other civic organizations of which she was a member. Mrs. George Gellhorn, a former president of the St. Louis chapter of the League of Women Voters, will speak.

Mrs. Thayer's husband, a field representative of the American Red Cross in Hawaii, has arrived in St. Louis for the services. Mrs. Thayer was found dead in her apartment at 4515 Lindell boulevard Feb. 3.

JAMES B. REMLEY FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW AFTERNOON

Funeral services for James B. Remley, founder of the Jim Remley market chain of retail food stores, who died yesterday at De Paul Hospital of complications following a brief illness, will be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Bopp undertaking establishment, Hanley road and Forsythe boulevard, Clayton. Burial will be in Valhalla Cemetery.

Mr. Remley, 62 years old, opened his first store in Wellston about 20 years ago and at the time of his retirement four years ago owned eight stores in the city, St. Louis county and on the East Side. Although sold to Food Center, the stores continued to bear his name.

He is survived by a son, Edward P. Remley, and a sister, Mrs. Julia Meyers. He lived at 7719 Olive boulevard, University City.

STELLE DENIES SEEKING REMOVAL OF GEN. BRADLEY

Legion Commander Tells Meeting Here Veterans' Agency Is Beginning to Follow Advice.

In defense against widespread criticism which followed his attack on Gen. Omar N. Bradley, head of the Veterans' Administration, John Stelle, national commander of the American Legion, denied last night that he had ever asked that Gen. Bradley be removed.

Stelle, speaking at a dinner at Hotel Coronado sponsored by the tenth, eleventh and twelfth districts of the Missouri American Legion department, then launched into a counter-offensive against the Veterans' Administration.

He shouted "he lied" in reply to statements made by Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, surgeon general of the Veterans' Administration, recently, that even 20,000,000 Americans would be eligible for hospitalization by the Veterans' Administration. Stelle said "not that many veterans would be willing to take the pauper's path."

Says Service Is Improving.

In effect, after his categorical denial of statements about Gen. Bradley which he had been reported as making, Stelle declared that the Veterans' Administration had refused to take the advice of national Legion officials in the conduct of the administration. He said that American Legion membership had grown because the Legion was able to get "service" for veterans.

Since his attack, Stelle added, the Veterans' Administration has begun to follow the Legion's advice, by putting on extra help, in the attempt to process veterans' claims faster, and by using Army hospitals as veterans' hospitals.

The whole "impression" that he had attacked Gen. Bradley, Stelle said, resulted from a statement by him to newspaper reporters that he would "let the chips fall where they may." Reporters called him after Stelle had sent a letter to Congressmen sharply criticizing the Veterans' Administration.

Stelle had been quoted by the Associated Press as declaring, "what we need in charge of the Veterans' Administration is a seasoned business man, not a soldier, however good a soldier he may be." Last night, Stelle read a version of the letter he had sent to Congressmen which did not contain this statement.

Denies Quarrel Over Hospital.

He praised Gen. Bradley "as a general," and admitted "I may have got a little hot under the collar and talked too much," in a telephone conversation with Gen. Bradley. Stelle denied he had quarreled with Gen. Bradley concerning the location of a hospital in Decatur, Ill., as reported by Bradley. Rather, Stelle said, he was "a little angry because Gen. Bradley refused to serve on a committee to educate war orphans."

No one at the meeting objected to Stelle's previously reported attack on Gen. Bradley. He was greeted with a rising ovation when he entered the banquet hall. In introducing him, William Stone of Kansas City, member of the Legion national executive committee from Missouri, said that "not all, possibly, share his convictions, but whatever he does is for the welfare of the veteran."

The Council of Service Officers representing American Legion posts in St. Louis and St. Louis county last week adopted a resolution repudiating Stelle's "statements and accusations," and directing Stone to bring the matter up with the national executive body for "appropriate action." Many other veterans' organizations also have taken action opposing Stelle.

Criticizes Policies.

Stelle, however, continued his criticism of the Veterans' Administration. He accused representatives of the Veterans' Administration of seeking to limit hospitalization to veterans with service-connected disabilities. He condemned the Veterans' Administration practice of checking discharge papers against War Department records as "unnecessary."

Following Stelle's address, Ben P. Manheimer, toastmaster, said "I am sure Commander Stelle has explained things and leaves us with a better understanding of the situation."

EARL BROWDER EXPELLED FROM COMMUNIST PARTY

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP)—Earl Browder, former national chairman of the Communist party, has been ousted from the party by the national committee for a long list of reasons, including "deserting to the side of the class enemy—American monopoly capital."

The committee announced the action last night. It said Browder was expelled by a unanimous vote. His expulsion was recommended by the national board of the party Feb. 6. The committee said it had "categorically" rejected an appeal by Browder and that the appeal "in itself confirms the correctness of charges preferred against him by the board."

William Z. Foster succeeded Browder as party head last September. Browder, party leader for 15 years, recently announced his entry into business through formation of "Distributors Guide, Inc.," described as a service for locating "scarce merchandise."

CAP to Be Part of Air Force. WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Gen. Carl Spatz, commanding general of the Army Air Force, announced yesterday that the Civil Air Patrol, volunteer organization, will continue as an auxiliary of the air force. Appropriations for the CAP will not be available after March 31.

TUGBOAT MEN GO BACK TO WORK, TRANSPORT FUEL

Schools Reopen, Heat Turned On Again in Subways — Brownout to Be Lifted Tomorrow.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP)—New York's striking tugboat workers, whose 10-day walkout created a fuel shortage affecting millions and brought a drastic 18-hour shutdown of virtually all business, went back to work today.

Within an hour after workers trooped aboard their craft at 8 a.m., the world's busiest harbor throbbed again with activity. Tugs immediately were concentrated on the job of transporting fuel across the Hudson from New Jersey.

Rigid fuel rationing regulations remained in effect, however. Although the crisis was over, a shortage was expected to continue for several days.

The back to work order to the 3500 men who run the harbor's tugs was issued by union officers last night following an agreement with 91 employers to arbitrate disputed issues.

As the situation eased schools, which had been closed for lack of heat, reopened their doors. Heat was turned on again in subways. A brownout that has reduced Broadway's brilliant lights to wartime glimmer will be lifted at 6 p.m. tomorrow.

Laurence C. Turney, Office of Defense Transportation representative designated to operate the strike-bound craft under federal seizure, said all of the harbor's 400 tugs had returned to work.

He said actual operation was turned back to private owners, as of 8 a.m., but that the seizure order would "remain in effect for the present."

Asked when the order would be lifted, he said:

"As soon as Col. Johnson (Col. J. Monroe Johnson, ODT director) is satisfied there will be no further interruption of service, he undoubtedly will lift the seizure."

Mayor William O'Dwyer announced the end of the strike at 7:15 o'clock last night.

Bill to Extend Forwarder Pricing. WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Legislation to continue freight forwarders' pricing arrangements with motor carriers was offered yesterday by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. The bill, which has already passed the House, is expected to be brought before the Senate as soon as possible, since existing legislation will expire at midnight Friday.

ST. STANISLAUS SEMINARY GETS $88,828 FROM ESTATE

St. Stanislaus Seminary, Jesuit novitiate at Florissant, will receive $88,828 from the estate of Thomas E. Merritt, former Milwaukee department store executive, it was announced yesterday.

at Milwaukee. Merritt, who died in November 1944, left an estate of $501,824, the bulk of it going to Catholic institutions. Bequests included $137,932 to Marquette University at Milwaukee and $24,458 to the Society of the Divine Word, Techny, Ill.

The Florissant novitiate is conducted by the Missouri Province of the Jesuit Order.

$550,000 PAID TO 34,252 JOBLESS HERE LAST WEEK

Unemployment compensation payments of about $550,000 were made to 34,252 persons in the city and St. Louis county last week, the Research Bureau of the Social Planning Council, 613 Locust street, announced today.

Of the total number 18,358 payments were readjustment allowances granted to former service men under the G.I. Bill of Rights. The average weekly payment was about $16. Excluding veterans, the council estimated that 15,894 persons received unemployment compensation last week, as compared with 16,301 the previous week. Initial claims increased from 3337 to 3696. Registrations at the Social Service Exchange continued above the January average. There were 690 last week. The weekly average last month was 583.

CHANGES STORY ABOUT DELIVERING DECODED JAP NOTE

Colonel Testifies He May Not Have Given Message to High Officers on Dec. 6, 1941.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Col. Rufus G. Bratton said today it was possible he had not delivered to high Army officers on Dec. 6, 1941, the first 13 parts of Japan's diplomatic note breaking relations with the United States.

Bratton, whose duty then was to deliver intercepted Japanese messages to top War Department officials, told a Senate-House committee he was certain he delivered the 13 parts to the State Department on the eve of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor.

He said he may have been mistaken when he told an Army inquiry board in 1944 that he delivered them also to Lt. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, chief of the war plans division, and Col. (now Lt. Gen.) Bedell Smith, secretary to the general staff.

Both Gerow and Smith have said they did not get the message and are "men of integrity," Bratton testified, adding: "If they say I didn't deliver this message to them, then my memory must be at fault."

The question whether Gerow or Gen. George C. Marshall, then Army chief of staff, saw the 13 parts on Saturday night, Dec. 6, has figured importantly in the committee's inquiry. The first 13 of a 14-part note were decoded by the Army on Saturday and indicated a fourteenth part was coming. The fourteenth part, containing strong language breaking off "peace negotiations," was not received until Sunday morning.

The argument in the committee has run, however, that if Marshall or Gerow saw the 13 parts they should have been prepared for swift action when the fourteenth part arrived.

Marshall went horseback riding Sunday morning, Dec. 7, and did not see the fourteenth part for several hours after its arrival. Then he drafted a warning message for Hawaii and other overseas stations. By then it was nearly noon. The warning reached Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, commander in Hawaii, hours after the attack.

Earlier in the day, the committee recalled for further examination Henry C. Clausen, former lieutenant colonel who made a supplemental Army inquiry of the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Representative Gearhart (Rep., California), told Clausen that he thought "the greatest mystery of Pearl Harbor" was where Gen. Marshall and Adm. Harold R. Stark, former chief of naval operations, were the night before the attack. Marshall and Stark have testified they do not remember their whereabouts that night.

Gearhart suggested that Clausen, in his investigation, should have questioned orderlies and servants to clear up the point.

Clausen disagreed. He said that would have been "attacking twigs, and my job was attacking the trunk, the roots."

Meanwhile, Senator Ferguson (Rep., Michigan), told a reporter that "if nobody else does," he will seek extension of the congressional inquiry until June 30. The three-month-old investigation — already once extended — is scheduled to end tomorrow unless the Senate and House vote more time for it.

Out of about 12,000 pages of testimony taken has emerged at least one thing on which Republicans and Democrats agree — a proposal that a single office weigh all military intelligence. The proposal, made by Clausen at a session last night, was received enthusiastically by all the committee members present.

Clausen said he found "jealousy between the services" hampering intelligence work not only in 1941 but right down to the end of the war.

He told of what he called the Navy "short-changing" the Army on the Japanese messages it intercepted and decoded in Manila, Hawaii and Washington.

He recommended something which apparently would go farther than the action already taken by President Truman in setting up a United States Intelligence Agency to function for the War, Navy and State departments.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's hospital, said at Pound's sanity hearing, that he is unable to maintain a coherent line of thought.

CHINA RECOGNIZES MONGOLIA

CHUNGKING, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Outer Mongolian delegation said today it had reached an agreement with the Central Chinese Government to establish diplomatic relations and for the exchange of ministers.

Mongolia recently voted to retain its autonomous status, which had been guaranteed by the Allies at the Yalta conference.

Killed in Action

PURSLEY Dead HERRON Dead

3 REPORTED MISSING NOW LISTED AS DEAD

Lt. (jg) Herron, Pilot of Bomber, Lost in Marshall Islands Feb. 13, 1944.

Three men from the St. Louis area who previously were reported missing in action are now listed as dead by the War and Navy Departments. They were:

Pfc. Harold J. Pursley, 26 years old, reported missing in action in Germany. His wife, Mrs. Johanna G. Pursley, lives at 8831 Burton avenue, Overland. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Pursley, live in Lubbering, Mo.

Lt. (jg) John H. Herron, 28, reported missing in action when the Liberator bomber of which he was pilot was lost in the Marshall Islands Feb. 13, 1944. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for saving a Catalina flying boat at Kiska Jan. 10, 1943. He is the son of Mrs. Irene N. Herron, 240 South Van Buren avenue, Kirkwood.

Quartermaster I-C William Winter, 25, reported missing when his submarine, the Trout, was lost in the Pacific Feb. 16, 1944. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Winter, live at 3936 South Compton avenue.

ADMITS WRITING THREATENING LETTER TO HIS BROTHER

When Walter Newell, who operates a leather goods shop at 1907 South Broadway, received a threatening letter last Nov. 3, he turned it over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

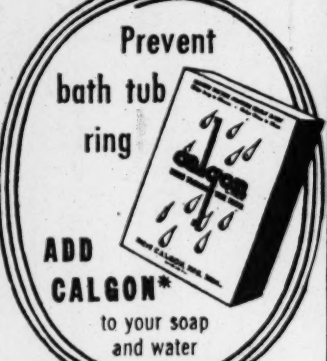

As a result of FBI investigation, Newell's brother, Clyde E. Newell, 19 years old, of 1728 Ohio avenue, yesterday admitted to agents that he was the author of the letter, which said, "You will be killed in one week and if you talk to police your wife will get it too."

Clyde Newell said he wrote the letter to "worry" his brother, following a family quarrel. A warrant has been issued charging Clyde Newell with writing a threatening letter. Under the federal extortion statutes, this carries a maximum penalty of $5000 fine and 20 years in the penitentiary.

NEW PREDICTION NAZIS' TRIAL WILL LAST UNTIL FALL

Arguments Set for Saturday on Defense Plea for 3-Week Recess to Prepare Case.

NUERNBERG, Feb. 14 (AP)—Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence, president of the international military tribunal, said today that the court would hear arguments Saturday on defense requests for a three-week adjournment of the war crimes trial when the prosecution completes its case. The American prosecution staff appeared to be opposed to the length of the adjournment. It was expected to argue that one week would give counsel for the 22 individual defendants and six Nazi organizations sufficient time to prepare.

The arguments are expected to have considerable bearing on the ultimate length of the trial, which began last November. One member of the court is reported to have told friends he expected to be in Nuernberg until September and the belief is widely held here that no verdict can come before that month.

The Russians placed the Katyn forest murders before the court today, charging that the Germans attempted with extortion and bribery to find civilian witnesses who would say the mass executions were Red Army work.

The dispute over the vast graves, said to contain 10,000 Polish officers' bodies, led to the rupture of relations in 1943 between Russia and the now defunct Polish government-in-exile in London. The Germans first announced finding the graves near Smolensk and accused the Russians of killing Polish officers there when Germany and Russia partitioned Poland in 1939.

Soviet prosecutors charged with documentary evidence that the Germans used 500 Red Army prisoners to dig graves and then shot them. Thousands of previously murdered Polish war prisoners were dumped into the graves, the Russians asserted, along with the Russian grave diggers.

A dispatch from Vienna said Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor, was expected to discuss with the Austrian Government the question of the trial of certain Austrian war criminals when he visits Vienna Monday. Austria has asked that Arthur Seyss-Inquart, former Nazi governor of Austria, and Franz von Papen, diplomat, be returned to Vienna for trial.

Former Albanian Puppet Premier and Three Aids Get Death.
LONDON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Tirana radio said last night that Mallo Bushati, premier of the former puppet government in Albania, and three of his associates had been sentenced to death as war criminals.

BILL TO ENLARGE HIGHWAY PATROL PASSED BY SENATE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 14—Enlargement of the State Highway Patrol and an increase in salary for all members are authorized under a House bill passed by the Senate yesterday.

Senator H. B. Hart of Versailles said a larger patrol was necessary because much of its time now was taken in work for "weak-kneed sheriffs who cannot take care of their jobs."

The bill will be returned to the House for action on amendments. It would increase the patrol by 50 men, making the maximum 215. Salary increases of $600 a year for captains, lieutenants, sergeants and patrolmen are authorized by the bill. The superintendent's salary is increased $200, from $4800 to $5000.

The Senate passed a measure placing faculty members of the five state teachers' colleges under the statewide retirement system. The bill, introduced after it was discovered that the faculties inadvertently had been omitted from the plan, now goes to the Governor.

STATE RISK FIRMS RULES BY 1948, OR U.S. WILL STEP IN

Adequate regulations governing operation of insurance companies in Missouri must be set up before Jan. 1, 1948, in conformance with federal law, if the companies are to escape federal regulation, Owen G. Jackson, superintendent of the Missouri State Department of Insurance, warned members of the Insurance Board of St. Louis at a meeting yesterday at Hotel DeSoto.

A federal law enacted in 1944 permits regulation of rates by the states, but provides that regulations must be set up before the end of 1947, or the Federal Government will regulate the rates, Jackson explained. The law was passed following a decision by the United States Supreme Court that insurance companies which have a substantial part of their business across state lines are engaged in interstate commerce and, therefore, subject to federal regulation. Jackson said there has been no program agreed on which unites the many divergent interests involved, but that progress is being made toward establishment of regulations in the state.

WOMAN KILLED IN TORNADO

ARDMORE, Okla., Feb. 14 (AP)—Civic leaders and relief agencies pushed plans for rebuilding today in the wake of a tornado which swept the east part of Ardmore yesterday, fatally injuring one person and leaving 200 others homeless.

Mrs. Zella Orr, 65 years old, one of the 15 injured, died early today.

WORK ON UNITS TO INCREASE CURRENT BEGINS IN KIRKWOOD

Work on installation of two electrical switchboard units that will provide more electrical current for the city-owned light system has been started in Kirkwood by the Sachs Electrical Co., 2022 North Ninth street, which last week was awarded the installation contract by the city for $31,000.

The new equipment will be placed in a switchhouse at the rear of Kirkwood City Hall. Mayor Albert S. Kinyon said the units will do much to prevent power shutdowns such as occurred last December when a third of the city was in darkness for four hours.

Additional equipment will be purchased, he said.

The money for the installation is part of $75,000 the city has allotted for improving its light system. Kirkwood buys its power wholesale from Union Electric Co. of Missouri. The new equipment Mayor Kinyon said, will permit the city to extend its electrical system to provide for about 500 new homes proposed for two new subdivisions.

UTILITIES IN STATE FIGHT MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP BILL

Attorney Assails Lack of Interest Maximum on Bonds — Doubts Constitutionality.

By JAY B. WILSON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 14—Opposition of public utility companies in Missouri to a bill authorizing all cities in the state to issue revenue bonds to build or acquire water, gas or electric light works, heating or power plants, or airports developed at a hearing before the Senate Municipal Corporations Committee yesterday afternoon.

A. Z. Patterson, Kansas City attorney who said he represented several out-state utilities, told the committee that "cities should not be deluded into thinking they can make a lot of money through municipal ownership of utilities."

Patterson said there were several "fatal defects" in the bills, which would permit issuance of revenue bonds for municipal purchase of a utility after approval of four-sevenths of the qualified voters in the city concerned.

Lack of a provision for a maximum interest rate on the bonds and failure of inclusion of a maturity date for the bonds issued were cited as prime objections to the measure.

Other Objections.

Patterson took the position that proper safeguards for assuring payment of the bonds were not included. He said there was no sinking fund provision to guarantee redemption of the bonds and that the measure also failed to provide for issuance of serial bonds which would permit lower utility rates after some of the series were retired.

The question of constitutionality was brought by Patterson who said that the measure was contrary to the code in permitting interest payments on bonds to be made from proceeds realized from further sales of the bonds during the period of construction, extension and improvement of a utility and for six months afterward. He said that the constitution required such interest to be paid only from revenues derived from actual operation of the utility.

The lack of provision for a contest of the election at which the bond issue was voted was given by Patterson as violation of a constitutional provision which provides, he said, that such contests shall be conducted as provided by law and that there is no such law.

Measure Defended.

Appearing in support of the measure, Robert B. Fizzell of Kansas City, an attorney representing the Missouri Municipal League, said there was no demand for election contest provisions. He said that contests would be used "just for purpose of delay by adding another source of litigation."

Fizzell's position concerned only a possible desire by utilities for contests, a situation which never had existed, and not the possible desire of advocates of municipal ownership. Charges have been made a number of times in municipal ownership elections that frauds have been committed in the interest of utilities opposing municipal ownership.

Fizzell asserted that the measure carried out a provision of the new Constitution prescribing the method of issuing revenue bonds to obtain municipally owned utilities. He urged the committee to approve the bill.

The committee took no action, but accepted for consideration amendments offered by the Missouri Association of Public Utilities embodying Patterson's arguments.

AUDIT OF SCHOOL FUNDS DEMANDED IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Board Member Wants Chiefly an Accounting of Basketball Tournament Receipts.

An immediate audit of all extra-curricular school funds and particularly an accounting of funds received last December from a three-day invitation basketball tournament has been demanded of the East St. Louis Board of Education by Edwin G. Barmann, a member of the board.

Reports that more than $6000 was realized from the tournament, which was held in Almod Temple, have been received, Barmann told the Post-Dispatch. He added that the high school teams in the contest drew capacity houses each of the three nights. Eight teams from cities throughout Illinois participated, with the East St. Louis High School team winning the over-all contest.

"I Have No Suspensions." Barmann said Roger Bucknell, real estate dealer and member of the board, was chairman of a committee of 14 business men that raised the initial money for the tournament, guaranteeing expenses. Barmann said he had never seen an accounting of the tournament funds, although "I have no suspensions," he added.

Bucknell said he had asked for an accounting two weeks ago. Ray Burton, purchasing agent for the board, said the reason no report had been made was that some bills have been held up. He said he referred in particular to one from a light company, which installed lighting equipment on a temporary basis. This equipment was retained and will be used the rest of the basketball season. When it is taken down, Burton said, the company will determine how much of it can be salvaged and send a bill for the rest.

Barmann said he had sponsored a resolution in the board which provided that all school principals submit monthly financial reports of moneys received and expended.

Principal's Report. Only one such report has been received by the board, he said, and that was from William L. Baughman, principal of the high school. This report was for the year 1945 and listed income at $25,000 and expenses at $14,000. The balance of $11,000, Bucknell said, is in the bank in an account marked high school athletic fund. Barmann said the figures in Baughman's financial report were never explained. "I'd like to know how the money was spent, what the expenses were," he said.

Albania Expropriations Reported. LONDON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Belgrade radio reported today that the Albanian Government had ordered the expropriation of all foreign-owned companies and enterprises in Albania.

MOST OF JACOB F. HELLRUNG ESTATE LEFT TO RELATIVES

The bulk of the estate of Jacob F. Hellrung, president of the Hellrung & Grimm House Furnishing Co. and chairman of the board of the Cass Bank & Trust Co., who died last Saturday, will go to his children and grandchildren under the terms of a will filed yesterday in probate court at Clayton.

Specific bequests included $1000 to Roxie C. Davis, a maid, and $500 each to the Mother of Good Counsel Home, 6325 Natural Bridge road, Normandy and the St. Vincent de Paul Society of Our Lady of Lourdes Church. The rest of the estate of unestimated value is to be divided into five equal parts among Joseph E. Francis A., Jacob F. Hellrung Jr., Mrs. Catherine H. Dostal and the three children of a deceased daughter, Mrs. Amanda H. Williams. The family home at 6330 Forsythe boulevard, Clayton, is to go to Francis A. Hellrung and, for purposes of determining his share of the total estate, is to be valued at $15,000. He and another brother, Joseph B. Hellrung, are named executors.

No Fire Sale for Breadon as Office Escapes Damage in Blaze

Browns Suffer a Light Loss

By W. J. McGoogan

Fire in the building at Sportsman's Park which houses the offices of the Cardinals and the Browns this morning was confined to the offices of the Browns. Cork insulation in the ceiling burned, probably caused by a short circuit in the electric wiring and little damage resulted.

None of the records of the club was destroyed but work of signing players and preparation for the departure of the club's vanguard for the training camp at Anaheim, Cal., scheduled for Saturday was interrupted.

The fire was discovered by a passerby who saw smoke coming from the roof shortly after 7 a.m. and notified a police officer. Firemen spent two hours tearing out the smoldering insulation.

What! No Fire Sale?

Some fan remarked that inasmuch as the fire didn't reach the Cardinal office, President Sam Breadon wouldn't be able to hold a fire sale of his surplus players. Johnny Beazley, star Redbird pitcher of 1942, has signed his contract for the coming season and is to report at the St. Petersburg camp Sunday, the Cardinals announced.

Beazley won two games of the 1942 World Series with Yankees his first year in the National League and led the pitchers of the circuit in won and lost percentage. He entered the United States Army Air Forces after that and was discharged just recently as a captain.

Breadon had no comment about the fire or about the status of Marty Marion, star shortstop, who has announced that he is not satisfied with the terms offered him and has returned his contract. A contract is in the mails, too, headed for the Browns from their shortstop, Vernon Stephens, who told reporters in Long Beach, Cal., yesterday that he did not like a clause in the paper giving him $2000 contingent upon performance during the year to be decided by Manager Luke Sewell.

Stephens complained that the clause indicated that he does not trust himself in playing condition and asserted that is not true. De Witt Mum as Usual

Bill De Witt, general manager of the club, hurrying to the office to see what the fire had done declared he had no comment to make upon the action of Stephens. It is likely the matter will be taken up in Anaheim, after the club arrives there.

De Witt was cheered by the news that Steve Sundra, veteran right-handed pitcher, had been released from the service. Steve won 15 and lost 11 in 1945 and won the only two games he pitched before entering the service in 1944.

He, no doubt, will be on hand early at Anaheim. The Browns announced the release of infielder Ellis Clary and left-handed pitcher Weldon West to the Toledo team of the American Association, a Brownie fan of which Don Guttridge has just been appointed manager.

Roster Now Lists 53 Men. Release of the two trims the Brownie roster to 53 men, 31 of whom have been announced as signed to contracts. Clary was obtained by the Browns from the Washington Senators and filled in at third and second bases.

West purchased from the Memphis club of the Southern Association pitched well at times but was not consistent. Several of the Browns are already on their way to Anaheim among them left-handed pitchers Al Hollingsworth and Frank Biscan and infielder Mark Christman.

Gardella Kicked Off Squad. MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 14 (AP)—Outfielder Danny Gardella was thrown off the New York Giants by Manager Mel Ott today without having been permitted to take a single workout, and Ott announced that Gardella would be sold or traded to some other club as quickly as possible.

Gardella, who hit 18 home runs for the Giants last season, incurred Ott's wrath upon his arrival here two nights ago, when he created something of a scene in the lobby of the hotel where the Giants are stopping. He and Secretary Eddie Brannick of the Giants exchanged hot words about the arrangements that had been made for Gardella's travel and living accommodations. Ott refused to let Gardella put on a uniform yesterday.

Beating Contract Deadline. SANFORD, Fla., Feb. 14 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers mailed contracts to outfielders Dixie Walker, Johnny Rizzo and Goodie Rosen yesterday in time to avoid having them become free agents by default. Catcher Bobby Bragan has been discharged from the Navy and is on his way to camp.

Boston Sox Shortstop. BOSTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Johnny Pesky, Red Sox shortstop, has signed his 1946 contract. With the signing of Pesky and word from Dom DiMaggio earlier by telephone from San Francisco that he agreed to terms, the Sox now have five players unsigned: Bobby Doerr, second baseman; Rudy York, first baseman acquired from Detroit; Al Fair, a first baseman; pitcher Emmet O'Neill, and catcher Fred Walters.

Elbie Fletcher Is Signed. PITTSBURGH, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates announced receipt of a signed contract from First Sacker Elbie Fletcher, 29, of Milton, Mass.

Star Bowlers Scheduled at Waibel's This Week-end

By Herman Wecke

When Emil Waibel arranged the schedule for his seventh annual eight-game bowling Classic, which will come to a close sometime next Monday morning, he did not overlook any spots. He placed at least one outstanding bowler on each of the squads. So fans who attend this week, hoping to see one of the topnotchers knock off the 1684 total with which Charles (Chuck) O'Donnell paced the pack after last week's rolling can pick Firing will begin again at 7 o'clock Saturday night and on this squad will be Junie McMahon of Chicago, who some seasons ago made a fine impression here when he rolled anchor for the Bowlers' Journal of New York when that team defeated the Hermanns as team match-game champions.

Hanks at 10. Then there's the 10 o'clock squad, which shows J. Hanks of Kansas City, who won the 1944 Waibel with 1618; Ad Carlson, Chicago, who last week won the $5100 top prize in the Petersen Classic with 1652 and Ned Day, a five-time national champion. If a kegging follower cares to stay out real late, there'll be Joe Wilman, present national match-game champion to watch on Sunday's 1 a.m. squad.

And then the final day, Sunday Bomar, 1940 winner of the Waibel and former match-game champion, will be on the 6 o'clock squad, as will J. Stanley of Cleveland, who won the 1942 A.B.C. singles championship with a three-game out of 756.

At 7 p.m., there will be Frank Mataya, who starting next Saturday, will roll Nelson Burton in a special 32-game match; Sam Garofalo, Connie Schwoegler of Madison, Wis., another ex-national champion; Russ Gerstede, one of Milwaukee's best and Dawes Comins, Kansas City star.

Other Topnotchers. Buzz Tonkovic, who won last year with 1656, will bowl at 10 p.m., along with Paul Krumske, Chicago, a former match-game champ and Harold Asplund of Denver, one of the top 10 keggers of the country for the past five seasons.

And when the final squad goes on (scheduled at 1 o'clock, Monday morning, but it probably will be later) there will be such aces as Joe Sinke of Chicago, Therman Gibson of Detroit, who in an all-star league match at Heide's last November, rolled 769, highest in St. Louis this season and Eddie Koepf, Cleveland sharpshooter.

Of course there will be others in the more than 200, but the above mentioned are just a few of the recognized topnotchers.

SHORT WAVES

Whistling in the dark is BILL NICHOLSON, Chicago Cubs outfielder and former National League home run leader. . . . A Chicago newspaper quoted him as saying he hasn't received a 1946 contract from the Cubs' General Manager James T. Gallagher said that if Nicholson doesn't receive a contract by Feb. 15, he'll become a free agent. . . . Military hospitals will have priority on official American League films of FONSECA, the last World Series, now being taken through the south by LEW FONSECA. . . . A boxing stumbling block for many a referee conscious of sportsman interest has been clarified in Maine, where the commission has ruled that no longer will a one-minute rest period be allowed for a contestant who drops to the canvas claiming he was hurt by a foul blow. . . . The referee must count and if the contestant is counted out and the referee and judges then must determine whether there was a foul blow and whether it should cause loss of the round. . . . The Ohio State University team in which athletic tempers often stir has been given another twist. . . . President HOWARD L. BEVIS felt called upon to say the university has no quarrel with its former coach, PAUL E. BROWN, following a statement by Athletic Director L. W. ST. JOHN in the alumni magazine that "Ohio State is counting itself exceedingly fortunate in having Brown eliminate himself from the university picture." . . . Brown, who took a Cleveland Browns' pro football coaching job last year, said he knew the object of St. John's letter. . . . RAY MALONE, Chicago Cardinal passer and punter in 1941, has signed on again. . . . Penn will lose to military service tackle DOUG REICH, ENBAACH and Guard JOHN SCHWEEDER. . . . Marked by the tragic auto accident deaths of a player and student manager at the start of the season, University of Idaho's basketball team now is climbing doggedly toward its first northern division Pacific Coast Conference title in 23 years. . . . When someone asked BLINKY PALERMO, manager of the knockout expert light heavyweight ELLY FOX, if Fox would meet ARCHIE MOORE, Blinky replied: "The only Moore I know is MORE money." . . . BULL REIGH, eight-year-old campaigner, and SHIDE, fleet five-year-old, drew top weight of 124 pounds for the $50,000 San Antonio Handicap at Santa Anita. . . . SUNCAP was within a fifth second of the world record for six furlongs when he raced to victory at Santa Anita in 1:09 2-5. . . . The controlling interest in Suffolk Downs, Boston, is for sale. . . . One offer of $1,300,000 has been received. . . . Muddy quail fields will be the condition for the final runoff of the United States Field Trial Club's open all-age stake at Herndon, Miss. . . . TIP TOP SOO, night heavyweight, E. S. Coulter of Greensboro, S.C., is a leader.

PFC Five Tops in Ex-Service League Highest scorer in nine County Ex-Servicemen's Basketball League games last night was the PFC team which defeated the Legionnaires, 68-14, in the Brentwood Division.

In other games of that division Forsythe trimmed Brentwood, 45-24 and the Hornets beat Welfare and Recreation, 25-23. At Overland, the Eclectics beat the Ramblers, 39-28; NAS trimmed Pattonville, 44-37 and Overland won from Little Angels, 42-24. At Maplewood Richmond Heights defeated the Leafs, 22-17; Old Men beat Little Flower, 28-23, and JB nipped the Rams, 24-22.

Retain Bowling Lead. Holding their lead in the Women's Classic Bowling League, the Mulligan Printers defeated the Monnigs, 2-1. The Camels won from the Burkes, 3-0; Whitaker-Ruehl beat the W. and S. Recreation, 3-0, and Du-Bowl Lanes trimmed Be-Mac, 2-1 in other matches.

Hornsby to Coach Batters Of White Sox

CHICAGO, Feb. 14 (AP)—Rogers Hornsby, who holds the National League modern batting record of .424, will help teach the Chicago White Sox of the American League how to hit.

Leslie M. O'Connor, White Sox general manager, said today Hornsby will fly to Pasadena, Calif., March 2 and aid manager Jimmy Dykes in club drills the week of March 4.

Hornsby, who batted over .400 three times during a 12-year stay with the Cardinals and led the National League in hitting seven times, currently is the director of a baseball school.

Hornsby, elected to baseball's hall of fame, last was active in organized baseball as manager of the Oklahoma City team in the Texas League in 1940.

Baseball Back At St. Louis U.; Mundt to Coach

St. Louis University will resume baseball, a sport dropped just before the 1942 season because of the war, Athletic Director Dukes Duford said last night. The 1946 team will be coached by Carol Mundt, a former Billiken athlete who assisted with the football squad last fall, Duford said. Baseball lettermen known to be in school are Steve Brady, a catcher, and Don Giles, an outfielder.

Billiken games will be played at Forest Park, and a schedule will be released later.

Terranova Due Here Tomorrow

Phyl Terranova, former featherweight champion of the world who is to box Charley Riley, St. Louis Negro at the Auditorium next Friday night, is scheduled to arrive here tomorrow or Saturday in time for a workout at the Missouri Boxing Association gymnasium Saturday.

Terranova has notified promoter Harry Bernstein that he would fly from New York. Riley, meanwhile, is working diligently to fit himself for the coming test with the No. 3 featherweight of the country knowing full well that a victory over Terranova would put him in line for some important bouts.

Charley went 10 rounds in the gymnasium yesterday including boxing sessions with Terry Thompson and Art Cooper. Cooper, incidentally, has been signed by Lou Wallach for a bout on the card at The Arena, Feb. 27 in which Ray Robinson meets Cliff Beckett in the main event. Bernstein has announced another bout for his program in which Jimmy Fields, Negro heavyweight, is to box Gib Jones of Charleston, W. Va. They are scheduled for six rounds.

Perkins to Manage Wrestler Ed Virag

When it comes to managers, Cliff Gustafson will have a big weight advantage when he meets Ed Virag in a wrestling bout on Promoter Sam Muchnik's program at Kiel Auditorium next Wednesday. In Gustafson's corner will be Ed Lewis, who admits 260 pounds, and in Virag's will be Johnny Perkins, a scant 220. Perkins, who operates Perkins' Playdium in East St. Louis, has signed a three-year contract to manage Virag, according to an announcement by the promoter.

RAY MALONE. Chicago Cardinal passer and punter in 1941, has signed on again. . . . Penn will lose to military service tackle DOUG REICH, ENBAACH and Guard JOHN SCHWEEDER. . . . ## Bud Gartiser Going to Notre Dame Deserts Missouri U. He Left for Navy—To Stick to Football Only at South Bend.

By Bob Broeg

Madill (Bud) Gartiser may gain the first downs in football and the first in track Missouri University expected of him before he enlisted in the Navy three years ago, but the agile Webster Groves athlete won't skim the chalklines or hurdles for the Tigers.

Gartiser will gallop for Notre Dame. The 6-foot 1-inch, 190-pound kid from the county will enroll at South Bend, March 4, for the spring semester, he said, explaining as follows his decision to desert Missouri, where he played freshman football in 1942 and competed in varsity track early in '43.

"I went to Notre Dame on a visit at Frank Leahy's invitation, and there I met the finest group of men I probably ever will see." Naturally Fast.

In the 21-year-old Gartiser, Leahy will find a halfback generally considered tailor-made for the T. Bud inherited winged feet as a birthright and acquired the quick-starting gift of the track, a combination ideal for a formation that features fast-opening plays.

Gartiser played football at Belleville and Webster Groves, to which the family moved when his father, A. F. Gartiser, became an instructor of mechanical engineering at Washington University. At Iowa Preflight, where the athlete received part of his training as a naval aviator, he arrived too late to play with the Seahawks, but last fall he played for Corpus Christi Navy against most of the top teams of the Southwest Conference. His coach there was Larry (Moon) Mullins, a former Notre Dame fullback and teammate of Leahy.

At Notre Dame, Gartiser said, he may give up track, a sport in which he set the district 200-yard low hurdles record here (22.7 seconds) and the junior 120-yard low hurdles mark (14.3 seconds).

At Missouri in the spring of 1943 he won the high and low

Sale Not to Change Westborough Operation, New Owners Say Sale of Westborough Country Club in Webster Groves for a sum reported to be between $325,000 and $350,000 is likely to be completed next month, it was announced yesterday by the purchasing syndicate composed of John A. Reardon, Francis A. Reardon, H. O. Byrd and H. W. Rich.

The deal for the 95-acre grounds at Berry road and Lockwood avenue is being made with Walter L. Pfeffer, majority owner of the club. Earnest money has been deposited since Jan. 9. No change will be made in the operation of the club this summer, the new owners-to-be announced. The grounds have been leased to the present management and may be again leased in 1947, John A. Reardon said.

Jockeys "Ruled Off for Life" to Carry Case to Civil Courts

No Proof of Bribe, Says Attorney

BALTIMORE, Feb. 14 (AP)—Declaring that his clients were "intimidated" into making statements concerning the alleged "fixing" of a steeplechase last November at Pimlico racetrack, Attorney Gately Flynn said yesterday he planned to file a writ of mandamus in Baltimore civil court "requiring the State Racing Commission to show cause why they should not be reinstated."

Flynn represents jockeys Howard Cruz and Scott Riles, and Trainer John Barry, who were ruled off Maryland tracks permanently this week by the commission after a hearing.

Also ruled off for life were jockeys Douglas Banks, Corona, N. Y.; Verne Haines, Hialeah, Fla.; Sidney O'Neill, Buffalo, N. Y.; William J. Owen, Chicago; and Francis Passmore, Aiken, S. C. Jockey Agent James F. Byrnes of Philadelphia drew a one-year suspension.

Cruz, of Virginia, and Riles, from Rio, Ind., gave signed statements to police regarding the running of the Bryndor Steeplechase Nov. 30, as did the other jockeys and Byrnes. Trainer Barry testified at the hearing, denying any knowledge of the affair, but made no prior statement.

The commission hearing brought out that two New York men approached several of the jockeys and arranged for $2500 to be bet on Mamie's Lad for the jockeys, with the winnings to be split. No money, however, was collected, statements read at the hearing disclosed.

Mamie's Lad won and paid $520 for $2.

"We plan to bring the whole story out in the courts," Flynn said.

Advised of Flynn's statement, Chairman George P. Mahoney of the racing commission, refused to discuss the case further.

Flynn said he hoped to file the court papers "probably Monday, or Tuesday at the latest."

Flynn told the commission at the hearing that Cruz and Riles would not testify, asserting there was "no proof of any offer of a bribe — just a vague reference throughout the entire case."

In the statement by Cruz read at the hearing, the jockey denied any knowledge of a bribe, but admitted meeting a New York man known only as "John," and his companion.

Riles's statement, taken at Virginia state police headquarters Dec. 3, declared that he "was offered the money by Cruz," but after waiting at the hotel until the morning after the race, "I said 'the heck with it' and went home to Virginia."

Rafterys Likely To Win Open and Amateur Races

It may seem a bit confusing to the casual soccer fan but the local finalists in the National Open soccer competition are also scheduled to meet in the local final of the National Amateur competition. It happens that there is no such thing as professional soccer here now; therefore, the players who compete in the National Open competition are equally eligible for the National Amateur.

Thus, the Raftery club, which last Sunday advanced to the local final of the National Open by defeating the Natural club, plays a National Amateur match Sunday, opposing Carondelet A.C. And then, at an early date, this same Raftery club will oppose the same Carondelet club in a National Open match. Out of all this duplicated effort it is probable the Rafterys will survive to represent St. Louis in both the National Open and the National Amateur competitions.

Here is Sunday's schedule of Cup and Muny league games:

NATIONAL CUP GAMES.
At Fairground Park, Grounds No. 1—Carondelet A. C. vs. Raftery. National Amateur, third round. Start 2:30 p.m. Referee—H. Vallina and J. Begley.
At Fairground Park, Grounds No. 2—Spanish Society vs. St. Mary and Joseph, 1 p.m.; Schumachers vs. Blessed Sacrament, 2:30 p.m. Both National Junior Cup matches. Referee—T. Eric and J. Blaisdell.

MUNICIPAL LEAGUE GAMES.
At Marquette Park—First District, Police Juvenile vs. Third District.
At Fairground Park, Grounds 4—Twelfth District vs. Sixth District.
At Francis Park—St. Luke vs. St. Michael; St. Gabriel vs. St. Michael; St. Michael vs. St. Edward vs. St. Philip; St. Peter vs. St. Joseph; St. Anthony vs. St. John Baptist vs. Holy Innocent.

Langenbacher Victor In Billiard Play-off
John Langenbacher won the second place play-off in the three-cushion billiard tournament at O'Donnell's last night by defeating Dave Smith, 30-28. Smith had previously eliminated Sam Schneider, 30-27.

Norman Shields had already won first place in the tournament.

Macon (Ill.) Player Registers 70 Points; His Team Wins 122-37
MACON, Ill., Feb. 14 (AP)—CHARLES MATHIAS, 6-foot-10-inch junior guard, scored 70 points on 32 baskets and six free throws—one of the highest prep totals on record—to lead Macon high school basketball team to a 122-to-37 victory over Illinois last night.

Mathias, who has not been his team's high scorer, registered 26 points in the first half. His teammates fed him the ball frequently in the second period to help him amass the 70-point total.

WRAY'S COLUMN

No Derby Favorite Named Yet.

THERE has been little airing of Kentucky Derby futures, so far this year. . . . The entries will soon close without anyone having listed a winter betting favorite. . . . That's because little has been learned about how the outstanding juveniles of last year wintered.

It's an easy guess that the Maine Chance Farm will supply the favorite. . . . Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham has several candidates one of which may not only be made favorite in the betting, but win the race.

Star Pilot, fine colt and winner of plenty of money and big stakes, is at this writing still the logical choice. . . . He might have had to give way to a stablemate, the filly Beaugay, had she not been hurt in a race which Star Pilot won—the only event in which she was not returned a winner.

There are plenty of other Derby prospects, however, that may make history this season. . . . For example, on the Pacific Coast, there's a pretty good racer named Air Rate. . . . He was a great performer last year in New England, where his owner, Fred Wyse, campaigned him. He won impressively all of his seven starts in 1945.

This year, campaigning at Santa Anita, evidently with the idea of winning the $100,000 Derby there, he has started twice. . . . His first out was a flop. He finished out of the money behind the good winner Galla Darnion, in a sprint stake.

But last Saturday both were entered in a mile event with $25,000 added money. . . . Galla Darnion was a 1-to-2 shot. . . . The Westerners let Air Rate's odds rise to about 11 to 1, at which figure he made a show of his field. . . . Now he's in form.

He probably will be favored by many for the 100-grand Santa Anita Derby.

If Air Rate wins this, he'll probably come East as favorite for the $100,000 Kentucky Derby. . . . The possibilities for this horse, at this time, are breath-taking.

Winning the Santa Anita Derby (it would pay Fred Wyse about $85,000) he might go on up the line and win four more 100-grand stakes — the 'Nita Handicap, the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont. Four races could net him $330,000—a record winning for any horse, any year, any country, for a single season.

If Betting Commissioner Tom Kearney were living he would probably lay you 1000 to 1 that Air Rate could not win the five big stakes named.

Several years ago Stagehand won the 'Nita Derby, beat Sea-biscuit in the 'Nita handicap, and seemed to have the three big three-year-old stakes (Derby, Preakness and Belmont) at his mercy. . . . Then sickness threw him out.

Only a super horse—even a super Man O' War—could be expected to cash in on five such important stakes.

Cubs Will Hardly Be 1946 Favorites.
SPEAKING of futures, it's about time the guessing starts on the probable finishes of the two pennant races. . . . Usually the voice of the expert is heard in the land about spring training time. . . . This year, silence.

Or approximate silence. . . . A few are protesting that 1946 will be just another year for the Yanks and the Redbirds to tangle. . . . But most of the non-committal authorities believe that it's too soon to even dream, much less predict.

They're waiting to see where the surplus talent finally lands. . . . Teams with from 60 to 70 men on their rosters could help a lot of major league rivals by sales or trades. . . . Until it is

New Plan for Cutting Stanley Cup Receipts

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP)—The National Hockey League's board of governors today re-instated Waited (Babe) Pratt, Toronto defenseman recently expelled on a charge of betting, but also approved the action of President Mervyn (Red) Dutton in expelling the player.

The National Hockey League's board of governors today set March 19 for the start of the Stanley Cup playoff series and set up a new system of player participation in the gate receipts which President Red Dutton said "is 100 per cent better for the players."

Under this system, the clubs will not share in any of the proceeds of the first four games of any series.

In the two semi-final series, all money for the first four games, after deduction of expenses, will be divided among the players on the basis of how the four clubs finished in the regular season. Players on the first place club will cut up 40 per cent, second place 30, third place 20 and fourth ten. For the cup finals, the winning club players will receive 60 per cent and the losers 40 per cent.

The playoff semi-finals will follow the usual pattern. The Chicago Blackhawks' home-ice will not be available for the first and second games of the semi-final playoff, so the Hawks will play the first two games of their semi-final away, if they finish in first or second place.

The governors also changed the conditions for award of the goal-tenders' Vezina trophy. It will be given in future to the net-minder playing the most games for the club which has the fewest goals scored against it.

Lead Police League.

The Tenth District team took the lead in the north division of the Police Juvenile Basketball League last night by defeating the Fifth District, 32-30, on Joe Herman's last-minute basket. The Second District beat the Eleventh, 20-18, in the south division.

London Gets 1948 Olympics

LONDON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The 1948 Olympic games will be held in London.

Lord David Burghley, himself an Olympic hurdles champion but presently chairman of the British Olympic Council, who made the announcement, said the exact dates of the world sports festival—first since the games were held in Berlin in 1936—had not been decided. Both the 1940 and 1944 games, the latter scheduled for Tokyo, were called off because of the war.

Squires Near Title.
The first-place Columbia Squires assured themselves of at least a title tie in the C.Y.C. basketball league by defeating St. Mary Magdalen, 24 to 22, at Webster Groves. The other games resulted in one-point decisions, St. Michael nosing out St. George, 26 to 25, and St. Gabriel shading St. Paul, 31 to 30.

The Horse of 1946?

AIR RATE, recent winner of a $25,000 stake race at Santa Anita, and a potential Kentucky Derby favorite. This son of Deliberator-Air Pocket (by Ariel), is being pointed for the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby and is a possible starter in four other 100 grand added money events. Unbeaten as a two-year-old, he already has won three $25,000 stakes for Owner Fred Wyse.

reasonably certain where the chips will fall, picking winners seems hazardous.

The Chicago Cubs, champions of last year, are hardly likely to be favorites in the National race, this year, unless the officials can buy some better players than those they won with last year. . . . Even lacking a standout catcher, the probabilities are that the Cards will be favored.

THE American League race at this time is a jig-saw puzzle. . . . The Tigers, with Wakefield and McCoskey back and a fine pitching staff, undoubtedly will get consideration as the No. 1 possibility. . . . The Yankees, with plenty of heavy artillery and a somewhat questionable pitching staff, will have plenty of supporters. . . . And then come those Red Sox—there, fellows, is something to catch your attention.

Oh yes, the Browns. . . . they will have some added strength. . . . But you wouldn't say they rated with the three A's, already mentioned. . . . Not even civic loyalty can coax that from us, as yet.

In fact, it's hardly probable that even the daring odds-layer Jimmy Carroll will sponsor a list of major league prices, before the season is near at hand. . . . Too many player transfers are still to be concluded.

REPORT ON ENGLAND—

Foreign Policy Mixture of Old Imperialism and Progressive Stand on World Government

Three Factors Given for Present Course Are Fear of Russia, American Financial Domination and Worry Over What New War Might Bring.

By LEO M. CHERNE
FIFTH OF A SERIES OF SEVEN ARTICLES.

ANYONE who attempts to describe British foreign policy today with one adjective is out of his mind. It is both imperialist and socialist; it is internationalist and nationalist; idealist and realist. It contains a great deal that is traditional in Empire politics and some things that are quite new. British foreign policy today is paradoxical, and the Government knows it.

Among the Big Three, Great Britain is the only one advancing the suggestion of world government. Great Britain is the only member of the all-powerful Security Council, the only holder of the veto power, who has publicly offered to surrender it to the United Nations Assembly. My most thrilling experience in the British Isles was to sit in the House of Commons and hear Anthony Eden and Ernest Bevin vie with each other to determine which party would offer the broadest program for a people's peace and a world parliament of man. And there was no tongue in any cheek during the proceedings. They really meant it.

The Bread and Butter Side. But then comes the other side—the bread and butter side. The Labor Government is no less imperialist than the most Tory government preceding it. The difference is solely in method. Not only are Bevin and Attlee no more free to give India her independence, but the workers of England are genuinely fearful of the effect on their jobs.

In foreign policy, more than in any other, the Government is a coalition administration. British policy for Germany, Italy and Spain is as Churchill would have had it. The clearest illustration is on the Palestine issue. For a generation the Labor party has campaigned in every English hamlet for a Jewish state. The Labor Government now in power says: "No go—no today anyway."

One of the brakes on change in British foreign policy exists independently of the Labor party. The Foreign Office is a part of the State, an entity unchangeable in the United States. No change in government can alter the personnel and policy of the Foreign Office in a few months. The public display of the old school tie can be prevented, but the career man still wears it psychologically. And it is in foreign policy that a Labor Government would inevitably lean upon the experience accumulated by the personnel of the Foreign Office. I must add, though, that I saw no evidence of any energetic attempt by Foreign Minister Bevin to revitalize his ministry or change the day-to-day practice of foreign affairs.

The party is by no means united on these questions. Talking to a number of the younger members who won seats in Parliament in the Labor landslide, I could not help but see their embarrassment over the present policy. One of them told me: "They could at least have promised that, after the temporary difficulties are resolved, full statehood would be granted to Palestine." Another added: "At least they could have repudiated the odious White Paper."

Stand on World Government. But the muttering and discontent among the younger MPs isn't changing the official policy. But the nature of England's relation to the empire and to the rest of the world is in fact leading the Foreign Office to take an extremely progressive position on world government. It is apparent in England that the government and most Englishmen earnestly wish that somehow England didn't have to be imperialist. Their great yearning for a better world—a world in which they could behave decently—expresses itself in the move toward world federation. But the aspiration is for tomorrow and the action for today, the world being what it is.

Three things dominate contemporary England. There is a fear of Russia which expresses itself in not doing or saying anything which would irritate the Big Bear. Criticism is meek and even the most diehard Tory prefaces his remarks with, "Now, I wish it to be understood that I have the deepest affection and admiration for the greatness and valor of the Russian nation."

NATIONS' FACT-FINDING BOARD COMPLETES TRIP TO JAPAN

WASHINGTON Feb. 14 (AP)—Members of the Far Eastern Commission arrived in Washington by plane yesterday completing a fact-finding trip to Japan. A commission official announced that Russia has sent word its representative will be in Washington to meet with the commission for the first time, on Feb. 20.

The commission, organized as an advisory body in October, has consisted of members from the United States, Britain, France, China, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, the Netherlands and the Philippines. Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, the United States representative, has been chairman. At the December conference of Big Three foreign ministers in Moscow, the commission was changed to a policy-making body

The Author

LEO M. CHERNE (pronounced "churn"), the author of "Report on England," is a young American economist who has been executive secretary of the Research Institute of America since 1939. He wrote his "Report on England" on assignment by Overseas News Agency and a group of American newspapers which sent him to find out how the Labor Government there is meeting the problems of reconverting the country from wartime to peacetime economy and adapting the industrial machine to changed world conditions.

The second dominant concept is a genuine concern about America. "America," says the Englishman, "has inherited our position of world supremacy. But America apparently doesn't know it, doesn't want it and refuses to accept the responsibility that goes with it." A brilliant and exceedingly presentable young lady, now a member of Parliament, put it to me cup of tea during the Commons recess: "America's got a fall coming."

It was by the closest margin that the British Government even decided to approve the Bretton Woods monetary agreements. The feeling throughout England up to the time I left was that a refusal of the loan by America would actually be the best thing that could happen to the Labor party. The John Bull spirit would make all of today's sacrifices palatable. Even now most people in England know clearly why they're scrimping.

England's Trade Dilemma. Here is the rub England can't live without imports. America has the most to sell. But we sell and don't buy, so England must constantly sink into further debt. There are two approaches to this dilemma. A number of the more courageous Laborites are urging "austerity"—consuming less for a while to build up British exports. The Empire Industries Association is quite frankly urging economic war against the United States. Build up the sterling block, they say. Take in western Europe, set up high tariffs against American goods, don't take any loan from the United States and don't accept the Bretton Woods agreement.

The Government meanwhile bridges the gap by levying one foot in the soil of economic nationalism while advancing the other on the path toward "one world." There is the third factor, though, which will upset this balance. England, more than any other nation is afraid of a next war. My first impression was the same as most observers'—the physical signs of the blitz have been removed—but not the mental ones. In a world of the atom bomb, England is terrified by the possibility that one day's war would accomplish what months of the German raids failed to do. Europe's just too close, Russia and America too big, and the atom bomb too powerful.

England keeps its empire to live. It talks softly to Russia to live. It worries about American financial domination lest it kill her livelihood, and gropes toward the new world order to make that living more meaningful and permanent.

U.N.O. Agrees to Take Up Levant Complaint Against British, French

Council Sets Case for Tomorrow—Assembly Adopts Resolution for Food Conservation—Inquiry in Indonesia Refused.

LONDON, Feb. 14 (AP).

THE United Nations Organization's Security Council agreed today to take up the issue of British and French troops in Syria and Lebanon at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The General Assembly, rushing toward adjournment of its first historic meeting, adopted by acclamation a Big Five resolution to conserve food supplies and insure maximum grain production to relieve the world situation.

It also hoped to pass quickly on recommendations for temporary U.N.O. headquarters in New York City and a permanent site in Westchester and Fairfield counties of New York and Connecticut.

The Assembly delegates expected to conclude their London meeting tonight with addresses by British Prime Minister Attlee, Assembly President Paul Henri Spaak of Belgium and Secretary-General Trygve Lie of Norway.

Indonesia Case Closed. The Council has before it a demand that British troops be withdrawn from the Levant. A Lebanese delegate said yesterday that direct negotiations with the French were virtually deadlocked. The Council cleared its agenda of all other issues except the Levant dispute last night by voting against intervening in Indonesia and by deferring action on an Albanian application for U.N.O. membership.

The Indonesian issue was marked "closed" by President N. J. O. Makin of Australia after the Council refused to send a commission to investigate the Indonesian situation, and declined to adopt a resolution which would have restricted British military activity in the area.

The Soviet Ukraine sought the commission investigation, but only Russia and Poland favored it in a Council vote. No negative ballot was taken since seven affirmative votes were required for approval.

Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs, made a second attempt to create a commission by proposing it as an amendment to an Egyptian motion to limit the use of British troops in Indonesia and call for direct negotiations between the Dutch and Indonesian nationalists.

The amendment was defeated when only Poland, Russia and Egypt voted for it. Then the Egyptian motion itself also failed, with Poland and Egypt alone voting in the affirmative. Makin promptly remarked that "the matter is closed."

Decision on Albania.

The big powers split on the question of whether immediate attention should be given to Albania's application for membership. Vishinsky, terming the matter "important and urgent," said it was not "a complicated question" and proposed immediate action. He was opposed, however, by Edward R. Stettinius Jr. of the United States and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain.

Stettinius said the question "requires careful analysis and we can go into it more thoroughly at a later date." His motion to defer action was approved by an affirmative vote of eight—the United States, Britain, Australia, Brazil, China, Egypt, Mexico and The Netherlands. No negative vote was taken.

The resolution calling for United the world's population" might soon face a famine because of a rice shortage. He cited an estimated wheat shortage of 5,000,000 tons and a rice shortage of 2,000,000 tons, but said that "with proper distribution we might avoid starvation in many areas."

Stettinius, French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and Chinese Delegate V. K. Wellington Koo made supporting addresses.

The Cuban delegation introduced a draft of a declaration of the rights of man yesterday. It is to be used as a basis for study by the Economic and Social Council's commission on human rights. The 22-point document includes the four freedoms, the right to seek asylum abroad from political persecution and to fight against any form of oppression.

Peron Assails U.S. Charges as 'Braden Plan'

Asserts Latter's Policy Endangers Sovereignty of Southern Nations.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 14 (AP).

OL. JUAN D. PERON denounced in an interview today the United States Blue Book which named him and other leaders of the Argentine military government as friends of the Germans.

"It is part of the well known Braden plan which disturbs not only the good relations between the two countries but the tranquility of American republics which see their dignity and sovereignty threatened by untimely interference," the former vice president told El Laborista, official publication of Peron's Labor party, which is supporting him in the Feb. 24 presidential election.

Peron's reference was to Spruille Braden, former United States Ambassador to Argentina and now Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs.

"Peron or Braden?" El Laborista published the Peron interview under a streamer saying: "Peron or Braden. That is the issue. Vote Feb. 24 for one or the other."

The publication quoted Peron as asserting the Blue Book "reveals an extraordinary imagination of its authors and a disturbing lack of proofs."

"The Braden plan," Peron said, was "well developed foreign espionage in prejudice of the sovereignty of all American republics and has a great resemblance to the justly criticized Nazi espionage."

It was reported that the Argentine government was preparing a reply to the United States charges. Informants said Foreign Minister Juan I. Cooke would refer to the Blue Book in a radio speech on foreign policy scheduled for tonight.

Meanwhile, some of the other prominent Argentineans mentioned in the document quickly issued denials of pro-Nazi activities. One of these was Gen. Arturo Rawson, who served for a short time as president of the military government in which Peron later came to power. Rawson issued a statement saying he took office with the firm intention of breaking diplomatic relations with the Axis but was ousted before he had time to act.

Welles Says Full Publicity Given Controversies in U.N.O. Security Council Inspires Public Confidence

Handling Issues in Open Without Gloves Rather Than Secretly as League Did, He Argues, Has Made It Possible for Democracies to Know What's Going On.

By SUMNER WELLES
Former Under Secretary of State.

THE United Nations Organization affords world public opinion its first effective chance to demonstrate its capacity to promote the pacific settlement of international disputes.

Full publicity is being given to the sessions of the Security Council, as well as to those of the General Assembly.

In the past, when controversies have arisen between governments, all knowledge of the discussion of the ways and means for their settlement has generally been withheld from the public. The official representatives of the peoples involved have all too often let the men and women for whom they spoke obtain no understanding of the issues other than what they chose to give them. The people have had little opportunity to make their wishes known while negotiations were in progress. And yet, it has always been the masses of the people in every country, when negotiations failed, who have had to do the sacrificing and the dying if war ensued.

During the life of the League of Nations, the sessions of its Council—the agency in which the decisions of the major powers were determining factors—were conducted in entire secrecy.

Some Fears Expressed. The fear has been expressed by the more timorous that the acid public interchanges which have been taking place in the first session of the Security Council between Mr. Bevin (British foreign secretary) and Mr. Vishinsky (Soviet foreign vice commissar) will do lasting injury to the relations of the peoples of Russia and of Great Britain. Many have felt that they will tend to arouse unwarranted hostility against the Soviet Union within the United States. It is asserted that the bitter propaganda which the Soviet newspapers have undertaken in support of the claims advanced by their delegates, and the equally acrimonious charges with which the British press has replied, will create an atmosphere of mutual antagonism which will retard rather than promote the pacific and equitable adjustment of the controversies which have arisen.

But if the United Nations Organization is to be given any chance of asserting its authority, and of gradually creating a true world order under law, would it be more likely to succeed if these disputes between London and Moscow, which have for so many months been coming to a head, were debated in a closed room from which the public was excluded? Can the United Nations Organization at this time obtain any more powerful support than that which will come through full popular understanding of the real issues which are at stake, and through the pressure which public opinion can exercise in favor of a just and rapid settlement?

Now that the American people have obtained full knowledge of the vital principles underlying the disputes which have come before the Security Council, it is far less likely that they would agree to any acquiescence by their government in some settlement which would impair the independence or integrity of any smaller and weaker state. Had the discussions at the December meeting in Moscow been held in public, it is improbable that American public opinion would have tolerated the scrapping by their government of its commitment to obtain for the Balkan peoples free elections and truly representative governments.

Reports from London indicate that it was due to Mr. Bevin that the complaint of Iran against the Soviet Union and the demand of the Russian delegates for an investigation of the military activities of Great Britain in Greece and in Indonesia were taken up at this initial meeting of the U.N.O.

Comment on Byrnes Role. These same reports allege that Mr. Byrnes (United States Secretary of State) insisted that this first session of the Assembly should limit itself exclusively to the creation of the organization of the U.N.O. and to the establishment of the Committee on the Control of Atomic Energy. He is said to

No. 10 of a Series of Advertisements on Common Estate Problems and Their Solution:

R. Has a Large Income and Contributes to the Support of His Aged Parents and His Married Daughter

R.'s income is around $60,000 per year and his estate has a value of about $800,000. For many years he has supplemented his parents' modest income with an allowance of $250 per month and he likewise gives his married daughter an allowance of $200 per month. His will, made some years ago, leaves his estate in trust to protect his family and to prevent his estate from being taxed twice as its benefits pass successively to his wife and then to his children.

Recently R. reviewed his estate plans and decided to make no changes in his will but to create irrevocable trusts for his parents and married daughter to continue their allowances on a permanent basis. Since a large part of R.'s estate is in the stock of the company of which he is an official, he used this stock to establish the trusts. Since its yield was slightly more than 4½%, stock having a market value of $117,000 was sufficient to provide the desired incomes and R. incurred a gift tax of $10,905.

By creating these two irrevocable trusts, R. obtained the following substantial tax savings:

1. He reduced his taxable income by $5,400 per year and his income tax by $3847.50 per year. The $5400 income from the trusts is taxable to his parents and daughter and their taxes are less than half the amount he saves.

2. The principal of the trusts will not be taxed as a part of R.'s estate upon his death. Since his top estate tax bracket is 35%, there will be a prospective saving of about $40,950 in estate taxes.

3. The stock which R. placed in these trusts was one in which he had a large paper profit and he could not sell the stock without incurring a large taxable gain. If the trustee sells the stock, however, the gain will be taxed to the trust. The trust will have no other taxable income since the income distributed to the beneficiaries is taxable to them and not to the trust. Therefore, the trustee can sell a little of the stock at a time over a period of years and incur a much lower tax liability than R. would have incurred by selling the stock himself.

Whether your estate is large or small, its disposition should be planned carefully to achieve the best results for your family and to carry out your wishes with a minimum of tax liability. Officers of this company will be glad to discuss the business and financial aspects of your estate plans and to tell you about our services. Your own lawyer should prepare your will and any other legal documents necessary to carry out your plans and should advise you on the legal questions involved. You are cordially invited to come in at any time to discuss your affairs without obligation.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Peculiar Virtue of French

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

To the United Nations Organization, now meeting in London, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt made the suggestion that the assembly should adopt an international language. It goes without saying that any language suitable for international usage must be free of ambiguities, pejections and illogical inversions of subject and object in sentence structure. Furthermore, any such language should be one already controlled by an academy which formulates rules governing pronunciation, orthography and syntax.

In 1783 the Academy of Sciences of Berlin offered an award for the best essay answering these three questions: What has made French a universal language? Why does it deserve that distinction? Can it be presumed that it will continue to enjoy this distinction? Antoine Rivarol (1753-1801) won the award with his brilliant "Discours sur l'Universalite de la Langue Francaise," of which I have translated the following:

What distinguishes French from all other languages, ancient and modern, is the construction of the sentence. Its order should be direct and necessarily clear. The Frenchman names first the subject, then the verb, which is the action, and finally the object of that action. That is the logic which is natural to all men. That is what constitutes common understanding.

French, by a unique privilege, has alone remained faithful to this direct order. French syntax is incorruptible, and it is from this fact that we receive our admirable clarity which is the basis of our language. WHAT IS NOT CLEAR IS NOT FRENCH; what is not clear may be English, Italian, Greek or Latin.

I believe that the above quotation should be reason enough for the establishment of French as the official language of the U.N.O. French has always been the language of diplomacy. It has always been the language of people of culture.

Why should we have Basic English, which is at best an abridgment, or Esperanto, which is at best a linguistic stew? ROBERT CLIVE ROACH, President, Societe Francaise de St. Louis.

Bilbo's Triumph

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
FILLIBUSTER WINS—FEDERAL BILL LAID ASIDE
—News Item.

May Mister Bilbo find enjoyment from his last blow at fair employment. With venom such as Nazis muster, He's proved the power of filibuster.

The eagle? Heck! He's got to go—We'll give his place to Old Jim Crow. The poll tax stays a Southern tenet, So Bilbo's still inside the Senate.

P. J. W.

Praise for Bilbo

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
To read your editorials expressing your own opinion and a few others selected from Bilbo-haters one would think everyone was against Bilbo.

It's easy to sit and tell folks some place else how they should run their business. From the looks of veterans having no place to live, truck strikes, school strikes, filthy restaurants and the crime wave in St. Louis, it would be better to clean up your own back yard before slinging mud at Senator Bilbo.

It takes guts to stand up for us folks up in Washington, and that's one reason why we like Bilbo. He's speaking his piece for us and protecting our interests, while your Missouri Senators leave you in a mess of strikes, housing shortages, gangster wars, rat-infested restaurants and belly-aching how other people should live.

A BILBO BACKER.

Jackson, Miss.

Rats to Us

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Your editorial on Franco being a U.N.O. outcast is in reality a break for Spain, for the U.N.O. is certainly not distinguished for its democratic principals.

The fact that Nicaragua introduced the procedure eliminating Franco from International Racketeers, Inc., emanated in all probability from the comrats or rats of that particular country.

This, in connection with your recent bid for popularity being based on rats, makes your editorial somewhat understandable.

J. J. BONE.

"GI Paradise"

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
During my time in the service, I have met men from all over the country. Everyone who was ever in St. Louis always commented on the hospitality shown him and the wonderful USO it has.

I hope St. Louis will not allow this hospitality to cease now that the war is over. There are still millions of men in the service who need places to spend their off-time hours. With the closing of the USO club here in Fresno and the proposed closing of the hospitality house in San Francisco, I hope that St. Louis will remain, as always, a GI paradise.

Low Comedy, High Finance

The price of a laugh is too high, if it is raised at the expense of propriety.—Quintilian.

The state of muddledness in which George Allen considers the propriety of his confirmation as a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. is an amusing one, at least to those to whom Mr. Allen himself is an amusement.

Mr. Allen, recognizing that there may be a conflict between being a director of a private business enterprise and being a director of the largest public lending agency in the world, proposes to set everything right. He will look into his two-score and five directorships and consider resigning from those which, in his opinion, might bring his private ego into conflict with his public ego. And the criterion? That, sir, is what we in the joke-manufacturing business refer to as "the payoff."

Mr. Allen will look askance at directorships that engage much of his time. He will look with favor on all others. Could he, as a director of the RFC, do a major favor in a minor amount of time for one of the private corporations of which he would still be a director? The contingency does not occur to Mr. Allen; or if it does, he is careful not to speak of it.

The notion that it is the disposition of his time, rather than the disposition of his sympathies, that would determine whether he would be a disinterested or an ax-grinding official of RFC, could be any of several things, according to the humor of the man who held it. In an innocent man it would be naive; in a sophisticated man, Machiavellian; in a man of limited mental means, stupid. In Mr. Allen it is merely preposterous, like so many things about the man himself, including his nomination by the President of the United States to be a director—and eventually chairman—of a 15-billion-dollar Federal corporation.

It is conceivable—though, in the present condition of Mr. Allen's reluctance, not very likely—that the nominee might dissociate himself from all the private connections, gained by political influence, which would compromise any official connection between him and the public enterprise to which he has been nominated.

It is not conceivable that Mr. Allen could dissociate himself by any means whatever from an equally basic impropriety in his nomination, and that is his vast lack of qualification for the job, either in training or in experience.

Another Sectional Highway Bill

The movement to break up Missouri's efficient Highway Department into a sectional affair ought to be over for this session of the Legislature, after Gov. Donnelly's ringing veto of the Quinn bill, which was intended to achieve that partisan and destructive end. But no; the log-rollers are in again, this time with the Farquhar bill, which differs from the Quinn bill mainly in setting up a six-man commission, chosen sectionally, instead of the 10-member board previously proposed.

This is just as bad as the other bill in placing highway construction on a basis of narrow geographical interests instead of keeping the present statewide basis. In fact, its author, Representative Farquhar of Cape Girardeau, is quite frank about this, for he says that the commission's members "should pull for their own sections of the State." And while they are pulling for their own sections, the interests of an integrated, non-political highway system can go down the drain.

Since the Governor is certain to veto this bill, too, the Legislature can speed up its urgent business by letting the measure die in peace.

New Maneuvers by John Nick

John P. Nick, iron-fisted czar of the stagehands' and movie operators' unions, went to prison four years ago after conviction of violating the Federal Anti-Racketeering Act. Now, not long after his release after serving more than three years of his five-year sentence, it is reported by members of the unions that Nick is using his old tactics of force and intimidation in an effort to get back into power in the organizations.

The unions had enough of Nick, theater operators had enough of him, and so did the public, during his long reign as domineering labor boss. Union members, as in the past, are probably too terrified to fight back, but there is another way of keeping him from seizing the reins again. Nick's reported doings are a violation of the permanent Circuit Court injunction issued in 1939, barring him for all time from mixing into union affairs, without permission of Local 143, the movie operators' organization. According to its business agent, Nick has not applied for or been granted such permission.

The next move is obviously up to the Circuit Court, whose order is being defied by Nick's new machinations. The law should still be able to stop him if nobody else can or will.

The President Stoops to Punish

President Truman has added a last pettiness to his conduct toward Harold Ickes by refusing to grant the Secretary's wish to remain in office until March 31 in order to wind up his affairs. The President has announced, instead, that Mr. Ickes will leave tomorrow.

The President's graceless precipitateness in speeding the departing Cabinet member suggests that he desires to punish Mr. Ickes for his Pauley testimony. It suggests also that Mr. Truman wants to have to face no ghost of a righteous and pugnacious Banquo across the Cabinet table.

It was beneath the President, and it should have been beneath Harry Truman.

Absences Beyond Excusing

Replacing the old J. P. courts in St. Louis with salaried magistrates, as provided for in the new Constitution, is so obviously a move for the better that no member of the State House of Representatives voted against it. It is all the more shocking, therefore, that nine out of 19 St. Louis members were among the absentee minority which almost prevented the bill from getting the two-thirds vote without which the system could not become effective next Jan. 1.

To be sure, members of this particular Legislature are in an uncomfortable plight. The session has necessarily been long, and the members' private affairs can be postponed just so long without being sacrificed. However, it remains true that absenteeism itself is one cause of this session's length; that the St. Louis members have fallen behind the attendance record of the body at large; that a man who offers himself for election incurs a public obligation which should supersede his other business. Surely those who ran in November, 1944, could have foreseen that the work required to effectuate the new Constitution would be long.

Under the circumstance that most members must rely on private affairs for most of their income, a certain frequency of absence can be excused. In this instance, frequency has gone beyond excuse, and it has almost resulted in frustrating the Legislature's vital function.

Runaround Still Running

That grudging spirit which made it an all-out job to get a one-stop Veterans' Service Center established in St. Louis is still at work, now that the center is in nominal existence.

The services it does include are badly delayed. Applicants' time is lavishly wasted with waiting and, even more irksome, with multiple questionnaires to make work for paper-shufflers. The staff fast loses morale because it takes a paper chase even for moving a desk.

The attitude of Arthur A. Poss, the director, can only make one wonder whether he is hopelessly incompetent or under hopelessly incompetent orders. Worst of all, perhaps, highly useful services which various public agencies and business and industry groups are eager to provide are not being provided—because the manager and governing board seem to find it an insuperable task to provide for including them.

All this and much more was related in documented detail in yesterday's Post-Dispatch. A number of fundamental faults were disclosed by W. H. Burnham, representing the head of the Retraining and Re-employment Administration, who investigated on the spot. Veterans, too, are complaining vigorously.

It is up to the board of directors, which has frittered enough time and footwork to prepare a small invasion, to begin right now making the Veterans' Center efficient.

Browning, Whitman? (Or, for that matter, the Gallic Goethe, Schiller, Heine?) French is fine, yes, for diplomacy and for the glory of Voltaire, Beaumarchais, Anatole France. But for our taste, and for the delight of foreigners who want to take on another tongue, let us not slight our own delightfully disordered one.

Vinegar and Honey in Argentina

The State Department's Blue Book indictment of Nazi influence in Argentina continues a policy of attempting to do something about the Government of that country by denunciation. Desirable as the goal is, the means employed have failed in the past, and there is little reason for hope that they can succeed now.

As John Lear wrote in the Saturday Evening Post more than a year ago:

Our constant blustering stunts the growth of democratic government in Argentina by dividing pro-democrats into two camps—those who resent our interference and those who think they need not exert themselves because we will take care of everything.

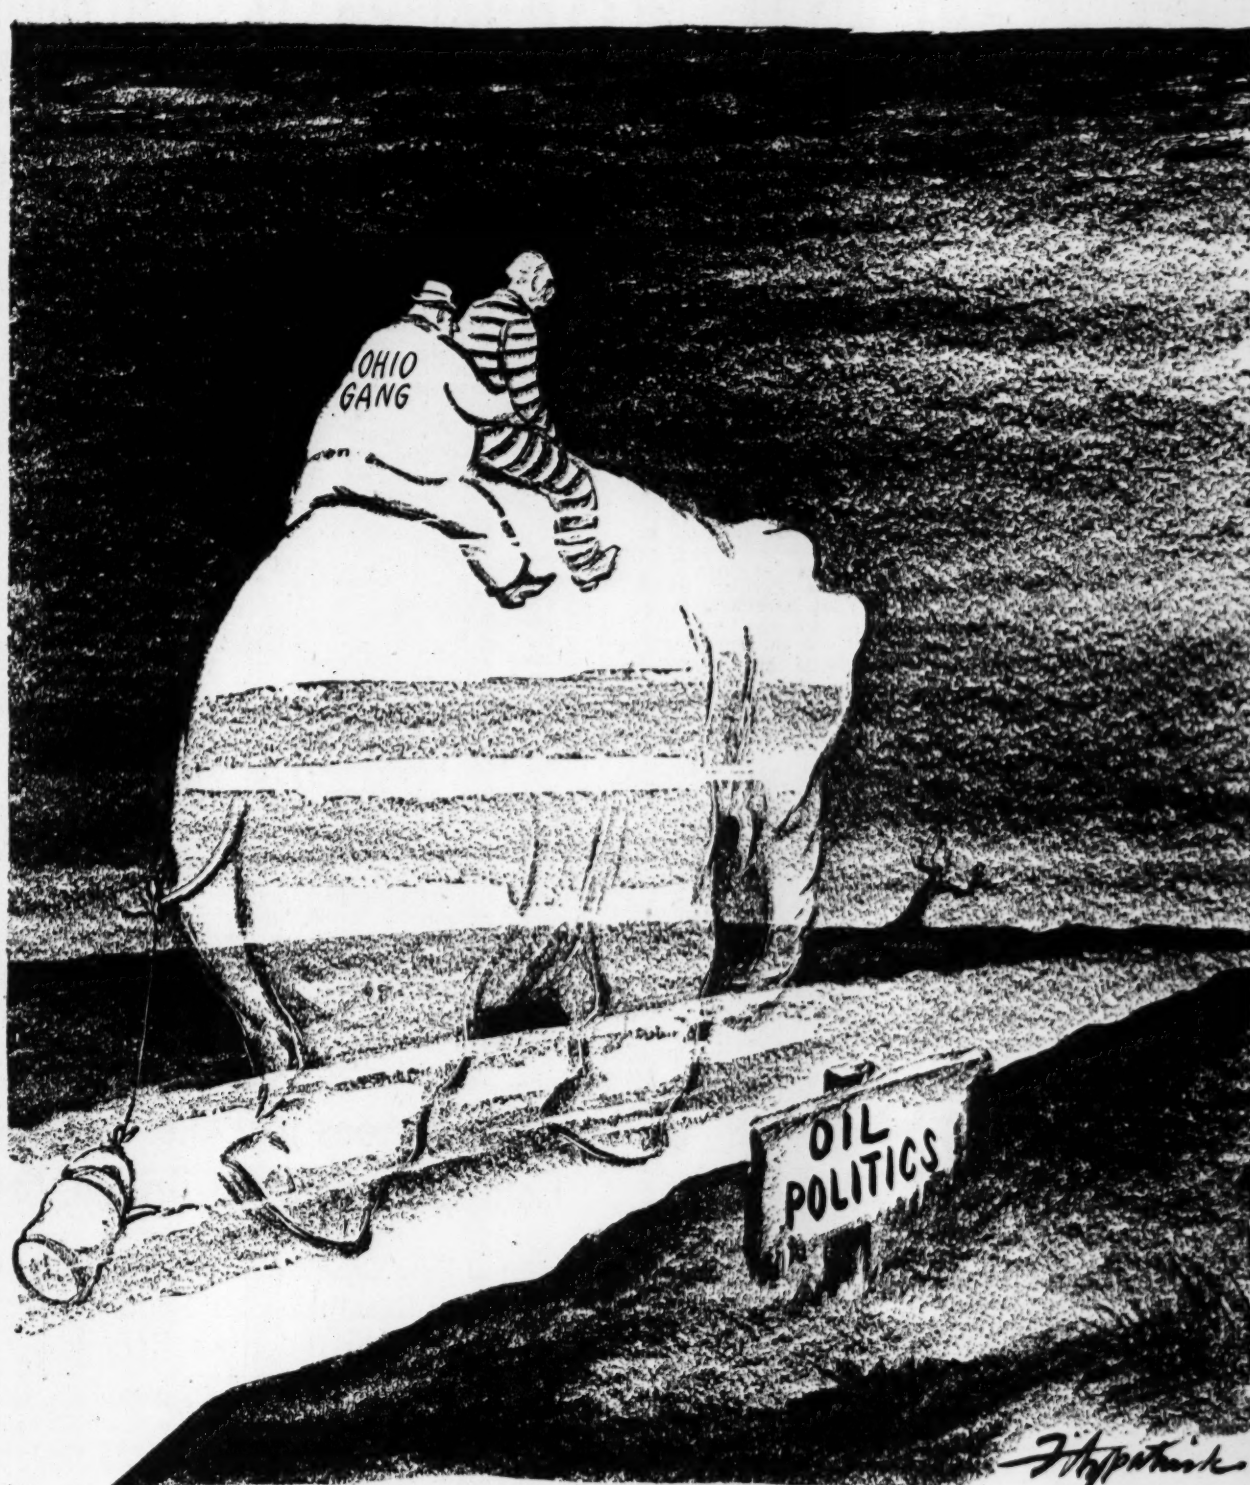

Our withdrawal of recognition in 1944 was a boomerang. It was used to foster anti-Yankee sentiments and foment jingoist nationalism through charges that the United States was meddling in Argentina's domestic affairs. The present denunciation is even more susceptible of being turned against us, for its timing just before the Argentine presidential elections, set for Feb. 24, is quite obvious. The State Department makes no secret of hoping that it will damage Peron's campaign for the presidency.

Why don't we try, instead, making it economically to the advantage of Argentina to be on friendly terms with the United States? For one thing, we could lift extreme trade barriers against Argentine products, particularly beef. For another, we could advance our position as a supplier of Argentina's wants. That is an excellent way to increase our influence.

Britain recognized the workability of the policy by keeping up exports even during its wartime shortages at home. Russia is making the supplier role a cornerstone of hegemony.

Mr. Lear pointed out that Argentina would have $750,000,000 to spend, much of it on machines to build its own industries. "If," he wrote, "we could get together, Argentines would have to come to the United States to buy those machines. Experience shows that Argentines who come to the States arrive in an anti-Yankee state of mind, but leave thinking we are swell people. We might win them over to our side faster that way."

The negative policy has proved a failure. Why not give a positive policy an earnest trial?

Backstage in the Wage-Price Fight

The Mirror
Public Opinion

Administration was kept from blowing apart in steel crisis by mediation of Bernard Baruch, financial writer says; veteran adviser persuaded Bowles not to quit, and helped bring decision on formula for price relaxation; he also smoothed the clash of personalities.

Edson Blair in Barron's Business and Financial Weekly of Feb. 11

The man who saved the Truman Administration from blowing apart from internal combustion superinduced by the steel crisis was Bernard M. Baruch.

Baruch advised, first, that the price of steel would have to be raised substantially higher than $4 a ton. Second, he prevailed on Price Administrator Chester Bowles not to quit.

Ever since President Roosevelt's death, Mr. Baruch has been on the bench while the major economic plays have been called by former Congressmen and Missouri friends of President Truman and Mr. Haneghan.

When the "first team" threatened to split apart in a public row at the very climax of the domestic impasse, with Congress waiting for testimony on extension of the Price Control Act which is the basis of the Administration's economic policy, the No. 1 elder statesman was called in a hurry.

Conflict of Truman Advisers

Mr. Truman at that moment was being warned by Price Administrator Bowles that he could not possibly afford to settle the steel strike on the "buy-off" basis proposed by "Assistant President" John W. Snyder. He was being warned by Snyder that Bowles' "inflexible" position on holding the price line would, unless it was relaxed, result in continuing, spreading industrial paralysis.

Bowles did not, of course, "threaten" to quit. But his response was such that the President reportedly spent his first 45-minute conference, after calling Bowles from the South, emphasizing that above all else there must be no split in "the team" at this time.

Baruch was in a peculiarly strategic position to resolve the personal deadlock. He had demanded much tougher price control than Congress ever enacted, years before any law was passed. He had demanded parallel control of wages. He was the spiritual father of the Roosevelt stabilization policy.

Baruch Knows Both Sides

Baruch has remained in Bowles' corner, often giving him advice, while other business interests, and Congress, were buffeting him around. Yet Baruch is also unusually close to important sections of the steel industry. The call to Baruch was made by Snyder, and from that moment forward the personal conflict softened.

The Bowles position, which had been strongly against any raise above $4 a ton, became a refusal to give steel "special treatment." If the interests of production require a change in policy, Bowles now insists the change must apply universally, not just to a single industry.

Baruch's position is understood to be that while firm anti-inflation control is desirable, moving the wage line up requires moving the price line up. That, obviously, was contradictory to the President's previous declaration for "substantial wage increases without higher prices." But it was not contradictory to the philosophy moving administration of OWMR under Snyder.

The basic decision, therefore, was for creation of a "new plateau," with a limited relaxation of prices to cover the wage boosts to which Mr. Truman has already committed Government policy.

Perhaps the most important detailed contribution to inside discussions understood to have been made by Baruch was differentiation between the price increase in steel made necessary by the wage raise, and the increase to restore profits to the 1936-39 levels as required by law.

It was this latter issue which led OPA to estimate $2.50 as the proper estimate. Snyder figures show that an 18½-cent raise requires a $4.44 per ton price increase. Baruch indicates that for every nickel raise the price must go up $1.35, which amounts to the same.

A Dispute on Figures

Hook together the $2.50 and $4.44 and the result is roughly the $7 a ton asked earlier by the industry. While even Snyder was not proposing settlement on a basis so high, argument of that nature from such a source as Baruch patently had a major effect on the attitude of the "hold the line" forces which he had originally assembled and inspired.

When Baruch left for the South, however, the issue had not been completely settled. Bowles was ready to "roll with the punch," but he was not ready to grant steel the rumored "White House figure" of $3.25 a ton unless it would be rationalized with a new formula. Above all, he insisted that the new wage-price policy be administered by him alone.

He wanted it understood that no one would be able to "go over the head" of OPA to Snyder. This was a difficult request for the President to accede to because if Snyder is to be the "general manager" of the economy, which is supposed to be the scope of his job, it is scarcely possible to bar him from one of its most vital facets.

Adviser Cleared the Air

The division has not been completely resolved, but Baruch's "mediation" has apparently cleared the air and atmosphere at the White House is optimistic.

Meanwhile, the whole great section of the national economy which is dependent on steel, and most of the conflicts of labor and economic policy, were piling up in line behind the battle of personalities.

Until Bowles and Snyder had worked out how Bowles can run price control without being overridden by Snyder, while Snyder runs the economy without interfering with price control, there could be no new declaration of wage-price policy.

Until the policy was announced, there could be no formal announcement of the steel price increase.

Until the industry gets that increase down on paper with a bonding signature, it will not bind itself to pay its workers 18½ cents an hour more.

Until the steel strike is settled, General Motors and other major tie-ups are simmering along. And if the steel strike is not settled quickly, the pinch of material shortage will begin to pinch more sharply.

HISTORY MADE EASY

H. V. Wade in the Detroit News.

It happened in Iran. Two businesslike strangers came upon Omar, lolling under the bough with his lunch, and said, "Move over, chum. There's oil under you."

Authors Defend a Play

"Deep Are the Roots," by Armand d'Ussau and James Gow. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

As a play, presented to New York theaters in last September, "Deep Are the Roots" immediately became one of the most successful and most controversial pieces of the year. Now published in book form, the authors have added a preface that is as successful and as controversial in saying what it has to say as the play was.

"Deep Are the Roots," as most theatergoers, even out here, must know by now, deals with the problems of a Negro recently returned from the war in Europe. The Negro was (1) a resident of the Deep South, where colored folks, no matter who, were still getting off the sidewalk when white persons passed. He was (2) the only man in the community to return both as a First Lieutenant, therefore "a gentleman by act of Congress," and as a recognized hero, recipient of rare medals for bravery.

To keep the Negro "in his place," he is "framed" on a charge of stealing a watch in the town to which he has returned in martial glory. Before the play is over, the whole town has been involved, and sides have been taken.

The preface, to go back now to that, is a tough-minded array of warrior words provoked by the fact that, in spite of the popularity of the play with New York audiences, a number of critics, both in and out of print, have called the play "not convincing . . . unmotivated . . . melodramatic," etc.—propaganda, in other words, for a superimposed point of view. Among the better critics, to give an instance, who have taken such a stand is Louis Kronenberger of PM. The preface, swinging a vigorous verbal fist, takes the offensive for propaganda (the authors call it "significance") by asking the playwrights, "the guys who absolutely must stick their necks out," to bring the Broadway theater out of the status of kept woman to the boxoffice, where "politeness" and "wit" are the criterions of "taste," and to restore it to a status worthy of "a violent age, an age of heroic virtue, of gigantic evil," that "cries out for a Shakespeare to record the heights and depths of human action." The authors, of course, agree that Shakespeare was Shakespeare and they must be themselves.

Getting down to cases, they consider the charge that they stacked the cards in the plot by the use of an "untypical" Southern Negro to dredge up "the truth" about the South, and offer the counter-claim that, "if this demand for typicality were heeded, the world would reject nine-tenths of its great literature."

There used to be lots of prefaces like this in the '30s, but this is one of the first since the war's end. It makes a worthy addition to the roster of prefaces. The play itself, in the reading, proves solidly constructed, exciting, moving, with the plausibilities at least matching the implausibilities.

A Biography of Gen. Patton

"Faction, Fighting Man," by William Manchester. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

Many hitherto unpublished facts about "Old Blood and Guts" are presented here, for the biographer had access to the General's personal records, and interviewed various relatives and associates. The book is a dramatic story of a dramatic figure. The author is unstinted in his admiration for Patton, and tries to explain away the numerous episodes that brought controversy and criticism during his career.

Why Isn't the Grand Mufti on Trial?

LONDON.

THE Nuernberg judges are in possession of evidence that Haj Amin el Hussein, former Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and the world's chief anti-Zionist, is the author of the Nazi plan for the extermination of over 5,000,000 Jews. This is according to a sworn affidavit by Dr. Rudolf Kaszner, now in Geneva, Switzerland.

According to Kaszner's affidavit, the Mufti shares the responsibility for history's foulest massacre with Heinrich Himmler and other Nazi butchers.

An Adviser of Hitler.

In his affidavit, dated Geneva, Jan. 25, 1946, Kaszner states that Haj Amin el Hussein, 58, Hauptsturmfuehrer Pieter von Wisliczeny, close co-operator of infamous Adolf Eichmann of the Gestapo, made to him the following statement:

"According to my opinion, the Grand Mufti, who has been in Berlin since 1941, played a role in the decision of the German Government to exterminate the European Jews. He has repeatedly suggested to Hitler, Himmler and Von Ribbentrop that the extermination of European Jewry. He considered this as a comfortable solution for the Palestinian problem.

"He was one of Eichmann's best friends and constantly incited him to accelerate extermination measures. I've heard it said that, accompanied by Eichmann, he has visited incognito the gas chamber at Auschwitz."

Kaszner also quotes Eichmann as saying: "I am a personal friend of the Grand Mufti. We have promised him that an European Jew would enter Palestine any more. Do you understand now?"

Not Among the Accused.

This statement, according to Kaszner, was made by Eichmann in his office in Budapest on June 4, 1944. Wisliczeny, according to Kaszner, made similar statements in 1942 to an engineer, E. Steiner, and to M. E. Weissman, director of the Jewish Rescue and Relief in Bratislava.

Apparently, Wisliczeny has been, or will be, required to testify at the Nuernberg trials.

Truman's Stubbornness on Pauley

ONE of the most mysterious phases of the appointment of Edwin W. Pauley and the repercussions that have grown out of it is the stubborn way in which President Truman compounds his original mistake. This suggests that there is a reason, even beyond the importuning of Chairman Robert Hannegan of the Democratic National Committee, why the President feels he must have Pauley in his official family.

The perennial symbol of the New Deal, Harold Ickes, now has departed in a spotlight of guesswork. It was an opportunity ready-made for the "Old Curmudgeon," who has had his desk cleaned out for weeks, ready for just such an opening.

While it was not generally known, up until a few hours before the Ickes ultimatum expired and his resignation was accepted by the President, influential Democrats thought they had worked out a compromise. Democratic Senators who dread a vote on the Pauley confirmation met with the President until late Tuesday night.

A Hint of Withdrawal.

At midnight, after that meeting broke up, one of the compromisers telephoned a close associate of Ickes to say it was almost certain the Pauley nomination would be withdrawn. Ickes would then have remained in the Cabinet until the March 31 date mentioned in his letter.

But Truman stood firm behind Pauley. He repeated the mistake he made at his press conference when he said he would stand behind the man he had named for Under Secretary of the Navy, at the same time casting doubt on the reliability of Ickes's testimony. It would have been so simple to put aside the question about Pauley with an observation that the matter was still under consideration by a Senate committee.

A Break in the Party.

This is the first open break between the Democrats of the New Deal wing and the Democrats of the city machines and the Old South. It has, therefore, a significance that can be gauged only with the passage of time.

At Ickes's last press conference, which had everything but a string band playing "Hearts and Flowers," he left the way open to support Truman in 1948. But he made it clear this would be a kind of last resort.

Until Franklin Roosevelt came over the political horizon, Ickes had been a lifelong Republican. True, he was a maverick, a muck-wump, who had supported Theodore Roosevelt in the Bull Moose crusade. And his specialty, from his little office in Chicago's Loop, was the harassment of rich old-line Republicans who thought they owned the party.

Nevertheless, his political life up to 1932 was within the G.O.P. Now that he has broken with Truman and Hannegan—some of the sharpest barbs in his letter are aimed at Hannegan—the way is open for his return to the party of his first choice.

That is to say, it would be open if the G.O.P. were prepared to accept a liberal presidential candidate with the stature, say, of Harold Stassen. Some liberal Republicans believe this will happen. But as yet, the signs are faint and hard to find.

As for his personal future, Ickes has gone exactly the kind of publicity springboard that will do him the most good. On March 15, he will be 72 years old, an age when most men are thinking of quiet retirement. Yet Ickes is in a ferment of plans.

Offers Made to Ickes.

He has had several offers to write a syndicated column. Recently, a representative of the Independent Citizens' Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions propositioned Ickes, who pulled out of his pocket a tentative syndicate contract as evidence of the various offers he was considering.

Those close to him say he would like to be head of the Political Action Committee, but no overtures have come from that quarter. The P.A.C. would prefer Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace if and when Wallace, too, leaves the Truman Cabinet.

The circumstances of Ickes's resignation will not be likely to persuade those who guide P.A.C. that he should head the organization. If the Republicans plump for normalcy and nominate another Bricker, then liberals and laborites will have no choice but to "go along" with the Democratic party. That would mean once again the necessity for an uneasy relationship between P.A.C. and the Democratic National Committee.

Truman's toughest job now will be to find a successor to Ickes. The lists are being combed, and one name that crops up is that of Justice William O. Douglas. But Douglas is not likely to leave the Supreme Court for a Cabinet post that may last only three years.

HEALTH PLAN TRIAL IN SMALL AREA URGED

Dr. Graham Says U.S. Bill Has Both Good and Bad Points.

A suggestion that the national program of compulsory medical care proposed by the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill be tried out for several years on a small scale was made last night by Dr. Everts A. Graham, professor of surgery at the Washington University School of Medicine.

The program, which is vehemently opposed by organized medicine, has both good and bad points, he said, acknowledging there is "much room for improvement" in the present quality of medical care in the United States.

"I would suggest the program be tried out in some small area—possibly in the District of Columbia, which is already under direct control of the Federal Government—as a 'pilot plant' to work out the bad parts," he said. "After a four or five-year trial, it could be revised and applied generally as appeared judicious."

Dr. Graham asserted there should be little opposition to four phases of the projected program, these being provision of funds for surgery hospitals, expansion of public health, maternity and child health services, provision of funds for medical research and education, and protection against loss of income during illness. But a fifth phase, providing that the Public Health Service surgeon general direct the entire program, embodies the danger of dictatorship, he contended, adding that the director, while having a 16-member council to advise him, would not be bound by the council's advice.

Dr. Graham spoke at a meeting in the school auditorium sponsored by the St. Louis Committee of House Physicians for the Study of Medical Care, a group of 18 hospital interns and resident physicians supporting the pending Senate bill. The committee is headed by Dr. Richard M. Peters, an intern at Barnes Hospital. His father, Dr. John P. Peters, who is professor of medicine at Yale University and secretary of the Committee of Physicians for the Improvement of Medical Care, spoke in favor of the bill.

$350,000 IN WEBSTER GROVES BONDS SOLD; 1 PCT. INTEREST

The sale of $350,000 in public improvement bonds by Webster Groves, the first sale in the city's $800,000 bond issue, has been made to the Harris Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago at 1 per cent interest, Norville E. Blaske, city clerk, announced today. The sale was completed last Jan. 14 and the city received a $1329 premium payment.

First project in the program, construction of a $25,000 city service building and garage on city property in South Old Orchard avenue, will begin this month, Mayor Clarence H. Appel said. He added that the 1 per cent interest rate on the bonds was the lowest the city ever paid.

Other projects in the total bond issue include $250,000 for sewerage improvement; $150,000 for construction of a library; $180,000 for park and swimming pool; $97,000 for street improvements; $80,000 for two city parks; $18,000 for garbage collection equipment and $15,000 for a park for Negroes.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

A CABLE yesterday to her mother contained news of the engagement of Miss Jane Clifton Franklin, daughter of Mrs. Elkin L. Franklin, who is now in Bedford Hills, N. Y., to Maj. John E. Russell, United States Army officer, aide to Gen. Howard, stationed in Vienna, Austria.

The cable came from Paris, where Miss Franklin is a club staff assistant in the American Red Cross. She went overseas last March and until a few months ago was on duty in London. Her fiancé, a close friend of the Franklin family, has often visited in St. Louis. He was a West Point classmate of Miss Franklin's brother, Lt. Elkin L. Franklin, Jr., a fighter pilot, who was killed in action over Italy in the summer of 1944. The prospective bride's father, Lt. Col. Franklin, died in Honolulu in 1932.

Miss Franklin attended Villa Duchesne here, convent of the Holy Child in Rome, Italy, and Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, New York. She made her debut at a reception given Oct. 18, 1941, by Dr. and Mrs. Frank J. V. Krebs at their home on Clayton road. The prospective bride is a niece of Dr. Halvern B. Clifton and the sister of Mrs. D. Joy Burnett (Helen Franklin) and Miss Ruth Franklin. Mrs. Franklin is married in annual guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Clifton, who is expected home next week. The Franklin home here is at 5391 Waterman avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Messick Jr. (Helen McPheeters) have returned from a month's visit at Captiva Island, near Fort Myers, Fla. A former Army captain, Mr. Messick served for three years in Italy. He and his wife are at the home of her mother, Mrs. Samuel B. McPheeters, 4955 Maryland avenue.

Other St. Louisans who recently returned from Captiva Island are Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Cheronnier, 16 Kingsbury place, who were away for a month. E. R. Clifton, home they visited in Mobile, Ala.

Harvard Head to Visit Here.

DR. JAMES BRYANT CONANT, president of Harvard University, will be guest of honor and main speaker at the Harvard Club Thursday night, Feb. 21, at the University Club. Dr. Conant, eminent chemist, was present at the testing of atomic bomb in Alamogordo, N. M., last July and attended the Moscow conference in December as atomic research expert of the American delegation.

Arriving next Wednesday, Dr. Conant will be guest of honor at a cocktail party to be given that day by Mr. and Mrs. William M. Rand, 9968 Litzinger road, from 4 until 6 o'clock. Officers of the Harvard Club are James A. Singer, president; Roland W. Richards and Dr. Roland G. Usher, vice presidents; John L. Donnell, secretary, and Edward J. Costigan Jr., treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Rainey Van Dyke, 2101 South Warsaw road, are spending a vacation in South America. They will be away until the first of next month.

Mrs. Otway W. Rash III, 31 Loren Woods, Clayton, and Mrs. Robert J. Crossen, 65 Fair Oaks, Clayton, attended the Council of Wellesley College Alumnae Association at the college last weekend. Plans for postwar Wellesley College were presented at the meeting, the first since October, 1942. Mrs. Rash is chairman of the acquaintance committee of the local chapter. Mrs. Crossen is a candidate for second vice president of the Alumnae Association. Mrs. Crossen's daughter, Miss Betty Gene Crossen, is a Wellesley senior.

MRS. ROOSEVELT VISITS REFUGEES, YANKS IN GERMANY

Also Attends Two Banquets in Busy Day—Opposes G.I. Marriages Abroad.

FRANKFURT, Germany, Feb. 14 (AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt visited two displaced persons camps, attended two banquets, held two press conferences and made two speeches to United States soldiers today.

At another press conference after arriving yesterday she expressed disapproval of G.I. marriages abroad. She said: "I do not think soldiers should be allowed to marry abroad, where they are a prey to loneliness. I think that before marrying abroad a soldier should return home and then if he wants to marry he should bring the bride over."

Mrs. Roosevelt said it was especially unwise for soldiers to marry German girls at present because "there is more to marriage than loneliness, attractiveness or just pity."

She pointed to the number of soldiers formerly stationed in England who were divorcing their war brides after reaching home.

Shortly after stepping from an Army plane she told listeners on the armed forces radio network and a small group of soldiers at the airport that she thought the United Nations Organization had made "a very good beginning" in London.

State Department Exams for G.I.s WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The State Department announced yesterday that a special written Foreign Service examination for members of the armed forces and discharged veterans will be held on Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. Soldiers, sailors and marines will be eligible regardless of rank, length of service or present location. The examinations will be held overseas where necessary.

Miss Molly Gibson of Bronxville, N. Y., has returned to her home after a 10-day visit with Miss Jane Latzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Louis Latzer, 6345 Ellenwood avenue. Miss Gibson and Miss Latzer were roommates at Pine Manor Junior College, Wellesley, Mass., and later were classmates at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. The young women recently attended a house party in Omaha, Neb.

Miss Latzer's sister, Miss Roberta Latzer, a freshman at Wellesley College, was among a group of students who spent last weekend skiing at North Conway, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Rainey Van Dyke, 2101 South Warsaw road, are spending a vacation in South America. They will be away until the first of next month.

Mrs. Otway W. Rash III, 31 Loren Woods, Clayton, and Mrs. Robert J. Crossen, 65 Fair Oaks, Clayton, attended the Council of Wellesley College Alumnae Association at the college last weekend.

Plans for postwar Wellesley College were presented at the meeting, the first since October, 1942. Mrs. Rash is chairman of the acquaintance committee of the local chapter. Mrs. Crossen is a candidate for second vice president of the Alumnae Association. Mrs. Crossen's daughter, Miss Betty Gene Crossen, is a Wellesley senior.

ST. LOUIS U. VETERANS MAKE BEST STUDENTS

Director Attributes Superiority of Returning Service Men to Their Maturity.

Veterans enrolled as students at St. Louis University are doing better work scholastically than other students, the Rev. Raphael C. McCarthy, S.J., director of the Veterans Counseling Service at the university, said today.

"We now have 149 veterans in attendance, an increase of 826 over last semester," Father McCarthy told the Post-Dispatch. "In fact, our veterans comprise almost 30 per cent of the university enrollment."

Father McCarthy attributed the fact that veterans were superior students to their maturity—their average age is 24—and their sense of responsibility.

"Going to school is a serious business with these men," he said. "Many of them are married and they are sacrificing now so they may have better opportunities in the future. Our files show that 543 or 37 per cent of our veterans here are married and 157 of them have children."

Pointing out that several hundred out-of-town veterans could not be enrolled this semester because they were unable to find housing accommodations, Father McCarthy urged St. Louisans who have a spare room to rent to inform his office.

"Another problem which has been causing serious concern is the procurement of qualified teachers, although 50 new instructors were added this semester," he said. "There is a particular shortage in such fields as mathematics, physics and the sciences in general. If engineers with a good mathematical background could arrange to do part-time teaching at the university, they would confer a great favor on these boys who are seeking an education."

ROOSEVELT'S ARMY STATUS ISSUE IN STATE INCOME TAX

Attorneys Seek Ruling on Possible Exemption as Commander-in-Chief.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP)—Attorneys for the estate of Franklin D. Roosevelt today were seeking a State Tax Department ruling on whether the late President was exempt from 1945 state personal income taxes because he was commander-in-chief of the armed forces when he died.

William F. Snyder, member of the law firm of O'Connor & Farber, said yesterday that the department was asked whether Mr. Roosevelt's position made him a soldier within the meaning of the income tax law. The law grants a year's tax exemption to service men who died while in service. Mr. Roosevelt died at Warm Springs, Ga., last April 12.

Although the Federal income tax law has an identical provision, Snyder said no Federal ruling in the Roosevelt case had been sought.

'MISSOURI WALTZ' APPROVED BY HOUSE AS STATE SONG

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 14 (AP)—The "Missouri Waltz" would be designated as the state song under a bill passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

Representative Georgia Daniel Irvine of Vandalla, one of the two sponsors of the bill, said the music already had been adopted as the state song "by the voice of the people and I am just asking that you legalize it by official act."

HARRIMAN, ATCHESON ARRIVE IN WASHINGTON BY PLANE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, and George Atcheson Jr., State Department adviser to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, arrived here by plane this morning.

Harriman, who, President Truman has said, would like to be relieved as envoy to Moscow, declined comment when asked by reporters if he expected to resign shortly. He also refused to say anything about his mission through the Far East en route home, which was made at request of Secretary of State Byrnes. Harriman said he would report to Byrnes and that he hoped to see the President later.

Atcheson denied reports of a rift between himself and Gen. MacArthur, and said the supreme commander had asked him to return to Tokyo following his consultations in Washington.

MAN CHARGED WITH TAKING PURSE, BILFOLD FROM WOMEN

Police applied today for warrants charging Cecil L. Cheeks with larceny from two young women he met in an Olive street dance hall. A warrant charging he robbed Miss Jessie Laubert, 7474 York drive, Clayton, a third young woman he met at the hall, of $40 last Thursday was issued by the Circuit Attorney's office yesterday. Cheeks, who said he was a bookkeeper and gave an address in the 1100 block of Bayard avenue, was identified last night by Miss Ann Marie Poe, 3710 Laclede avenue, as the man who offered to take her to a night club and later walked off with her billfold containing $10. Cheeks, 22 years old, was carrying the billfold when arrested by police Tuesday night. Miss Estelle Fusser, 5356 Page boulevard, identified the man, known to her as Bill Jordan, as the one who took her to a tavern on Vandeventer avenue Feb. 2, and on leaving offered to carry her purse. While walking west on Olive street, she said, he excused himself "for a minute," but failed to return. The purse contained $3. Cheeks, who was wearing an Army uniform when arrested, told police he had made a bet he could "pick up more girls in uniform than in civilian clothes."

More Dangerous Than The Atomic Bomb HUNGER

by THOMAS L. STOKES

Victor Hugo once built a novel embracing the whole problem of society about a loaf of bread.

A conversation at a recent London meeting of representatives of our country, Great Britain, Canada and the liberated nations of Europe to consider the European food problem indicates that the simple loaf of bread still may have much to do with society and its future in Europe.

The Belgian representative spoke up to say that if his country's allocation of wheat could be raised from 100,000 tons a month to 110,000 tons, bread could be taken off the ration list. Nothing that could happen, he declared, would give such a psychological lift to his people as to remove bread from the ration list. The same would be true elsewhere in Europe.

Such a small thing. Yet how powerful in its effect! Just to be able to walk into a store, as we do here, and buy a loaf of bread without standing in line for the daily ration. And only a small thing necessary to accomplish it—10,000 more tons of wheat a month.

Chaos—The Alternative

This puts in elementary terms the problem of feeding Europe this winter for which the United States has assumed a major responsibility. It won't take much, just a negligible percentage of our vast total of food, properly distributed here and there.

It may save Europe from hunger and starvation and their natural results—disorder, revolution, communism.

If it does, it would save us many political headaches, now and in the future. A desperate Europe would complicate our own problem—for obvious reasons.

Because of complicating factors, it is going to take efficient organization to do this job of feeding Europe. Such organization does not exist here now.

It is well that President Truman is acting quickly to eliminate the confusion and friction and the lack of a well co-ordinated program. This is the first essential.

Some of the complicating factors were in transportation. There was a shortage of boats for European shipments because of the redeployment to the Pacific and the long haul there. There is congestion in internal traffic in this country for the same reason. Refrigerator cars wait from time to time, for troop trains, for example. There is, of course, a serious transportation problem in Europe, with destruction of railroads and bridges and the clogging up of canals. There is also a deficiency in port facilities.

Here at home there is a complicated political factor in a noisy minority which is protesting the sending of food to Europe. This is revealed in letters to the Agriculture Department.

The noisy minority is a well-fed minority. In fact, we are all well fed. This year, despite shortages, per capita food consumption still was three per cent above the average for the prewar years 1935-1939, inclusive. Last year it was 10 per cent higher. This is because people who couldn't afford so much food before now have money to buy it. That included workers in our war plants. They were better fed. Those who could always afford plenty of food can't get all the variety of things they once spread lavishly on their tables. But they are getting enough to eat.

Clinching Victory With Bread

We are not suffering, and we are not going to suffer.

Many peoples in Europe are. The European situation is spotty, and not all bad. Some agricultural sections, such as Normandy and Brittany in France, are in good shape. So is Denmark which is exporting food. But the problem is getting the food that is available to the cities. The breakdown of transportation is the handicap here.

This is what makes for a desperate situation in Paris, for example, and other large cities. The worst spots in Europe are in Paris and Marseilles in France; Rotterdam, Amsterdam and the Hague in Holland; Belgium, Yugoslavia, Poland. The situation is very serious, too, in North Africa.

Normally a wheat exporting country, it is now importing wheat. The situation in Greece, once very bad, is improving. Norway is not in as bad shape as expected. Reopening of fisheries, which would help tremendously, has been delayed by mines in northern European waters.

Where help is needed, it is needed badly. It won't take a great deal—if we will spare it.

that never rings!

She's immaculate about her body... never takes a chance of offending others. Her breath is as sweet as a rose. But still she doesn't know why the phone never rings... why people never want to visit her home.

Nothing is more offensive than stale, musty household odors... particularly to people coming in from out-of-doors. That's why millions of housewives now use air-wick... the quick, easy way to destroy all unpleasant household odors.

air-wick kills the odors of cooking fish, cabbage, onions, nurseries... makes indoor air country-fresh. Just uncup the bottle and pull up the wick a few minutes before you start cooking. There's nothing to light... nothing to burn. air-wick contains chlorophyll... the miracle-working substance which nature uses to freshen the air in garden and forest. You'll find air-wick at all better stores.

why risk offending... get air-wick

ENLISTED MAN DEVELOPS TWO GUNS FOR COAST GUARD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Coast Guard disclosed yesterday existence of two new type guns, one an automatic rifle and the other a line-throwing gun, and credited their development to an enlisted man.

Chief Gunner's Mate James E. Sieg, of Baltimore, built the first working model of the automatic rifle while aboard the ship Mowhawk in 1944, the announcement said.

The Sieg line-throwing gun—both weapons carry the name of the Coast Guardman—was described as promising to surpass all previous models designed for that use.

JAMES CURLEY, TWO OTHERS DENIED NEW FRAUD CASE TRIAL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Justice James M. Proctor denied today a new trial for Representative James M. Curley (Dem.), Massachusetts, Boston mayor, and two other men recently convicted of mail fraud. They will be sentenced next Monday.

Curley and the two others were convicted Jan. 18 by a district court jury.

Convicted with him were Donald Wakefield Smith, former member of the National Labor Relations Board, and James G. Fuller, now serving a five-year sentence for sending fraudulent securities through the mails.

An open letter from Texas

When eastern folks come down to visit Texas their eyes bug out like a horned toad's. Why?

'Tisn't cattle nor ten-gallon hats. They expect them.
 'Tisn't our football teams—they've seen their eastern teams larruped by 'em too often.
 'Tisn't those wide open spaces—their grade school geographies taught 'em Texas is tremendous.
 'Tisn't oil wells and cotton fields—they've heard about them too.

Well, what is it that causes tremors of surprise to run through those visiting easterners?

They don't look for skyscrapers, and they find them in clusters in a dozen Texas cities.

They don't expect Texas seaports, and they learn that in ocean commerce four of our Texas ports are among the first dozen in America.

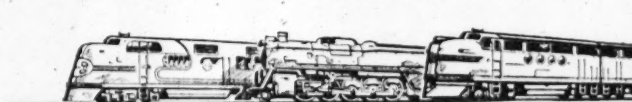

They have never counted Texas as an industrial state, and they see steel mills, refineries, synthetic rubber plants, chemical, paper and food processing plants and all kinds of other industrial units from Texas to breakfast.

They don't anticipate "seats of higher learning" and they can count more than two-score of the most modern colleges and universities, to say nothing of our art museums, libraries and other cultural institutions.

And their eyes tell 'em pretty fast why our city girls are setting a lot of fashion styles these days.

Everybody should visit us and see modern Texas for himself. So, in order to spread the light, we're printing this Texas message.

Santa Fe, a Texas partner and booster since 1880, and serving Texas with 3,693 miles of rail, with automatic block signal protection all the way from Galveston to Chicago, presents the above Texas Tribute as a mark of our appreciation for the great job Texas is doing in almost every phase of industrial activity.

BAR ON U.S. FUNDS FOR STATE PROPOSED

Plan Offered to Help Solve
'Debt Crisis'—Little Enthusiasm Shown.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 14—A proposal that Missouri aid in solution of the federal "debt crisis," by refraining from seeking or accepting further grants of federal money, was offered by Representative Curtis J. Tindel (Rep.) of Texas county, in a resolution introduced today in the House.

If met with little enthusiasm on the part of House members and was referred to the House Committee on Appropriations, after Democratic minority members successfully objected to a request by Tindel that the resolution be printed in the journal.

Tindel made it clear that his suggestion that the state make no more demands for additional gifts from the federal treasury did not apply to federal grants of money for social security, which total many millions of dollars a year.

He said the federal debt now was about 279 billion dollars and that Missouri's share of it was about eight billions, or about twice the assessed valuation of taxable property in the state.

"Continued demands for further federal subsidies, aids and grants to the states must be halted and the federal budget balanced," Tindel said. "These grants are nothing more than money of the people which the Federal Government has taken to Washington, then handed back to the states."

STOCK MARKET

RALLIES AFTER 5-DAY SEEBACK

Steels, Motors, Liquors, Rubbers, Rails and Specialties Up 1 to Over 3 Points at Best.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP)—The stock market today enjoyed a technical rally of 1 to 3 or more points but eventually encountered opposition and advanced to the close, were well under their best in the majority of cases.

Dealings, fairly active in the forenoon, slowed as the session progressed and trends wavered. Steel performers in the morning were the steels, motors, liquors, rails, rubbers, mines and specialties. Most of these backed away in the final hour and scattered losers appeared toward the finish.

Transfers of 1,290,000 shares compared with 1,680,000 shares yesterday.

The market was not as broad as yesterday. Of the 957 issues traded in today, 646 were higher, 167 lower and 144 unchanged. Twenty-five made new 1945-46 highs and four new 1945-46 lows. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed up .5 of a point at 77.6.

Basis of Buying.
Buying revived on the idea that a list may have been oversold in five successive declining sessions. Hope for a White House announcement on the new pay raise formula which could bring strike settlements aided sentiment to a certain extent. Numerous customers were unconvinced, however, and these continued to lighten accounts.

Favorites included American Radiator and Certain-teed, at highs for the past year. Ahead most of the day were U.S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, General Motors, Goodyear, Goodyear Tire & Rubber, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Du Pont, Allied Chemical and Air Reduction.

Losses, at one time or another, were posted for Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Electric, International Harvester, Oliver Corp., Consolidated Edison and Eastman Kodak. Philip Morris stumbled to a new low.

Trend on the Curb.
Among forward curb leaners were Barium Steel, Elliott Co., Cities Service, Franklin Distillers and Kohabaker Stores.

International Paper, on the big board, climbed rapidly in the wake of the first dividend since recapitalization in 1941 and the calling of a sizable portion of the concern's convertible preferred.

The real construction boom gets under way.

Mining issues were propped by the campaign in Congress to defeat legislation which would permit the sale of silver to manufacturers.

The contention was that the metal should be bought and sold by the Treasury at its full monetary value of $1.29 an ounce.

For the week concluded Feb. 9, the Edison Electrician reported the nation's power output for the nation as a whole at 11.6 per cent below the comparable 1945 stretch.

APPROVAL ASKED FOR U. S. MILITARY MISSIONS ABROAD

War, Navy, State Departments Back Bill to Permit Experts to Aid Other Countries.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Congress will decide soon whether the United States should maintain peacetime military missions in such countries as Iran, Syria and Saudi Arabia.

President Truman would get authority to send such missions, on invitation, to any country in the world under a bill introduced in the House with backing of the State and Navy departments.

The missions would help countries to which they were assigned to modernize their armies and police forces. The President also could send naval missions, where requested.

At present, the Chief Executive has authority to send such missions only to countries of the Western Hemisphere and to the Philippines.

Missions were sent in the war to Iran, Saudi Arabia and China under the President's emergency wartime powers.

State Department officials said passage of the bill would help remove the "sphere of influence" concept and would permit the United States to treat all countries alike, as far as missions are concerned.

In a letter to Representative Mundt (Rep.), South Dakota, Under Secretary Dean Acheson said the State Department believed that helping friendly countries improve their law-enforcement agencies represented "one of the effective contributions which the United States can make to world peace."

Mundt had questioned the wisdom of such missions in a House speech, asking whether those in Iran at present might not involve the United States in disputes with Russia.

Syria asked for a mission about six months ago, but was advised that no legal peacetime authority existed for it.

Manila Dock Strike Ends. MANILA, Feb. 14 (AP)—Nearly 10,000 striking stevedores returned to work today, ending a 13-day walkout which had tied up civilian and military cargoes. The workers accepted a 40 per cent wage increase. They had demanded 100 per cent.

CONCRETE-POURING CEREMONY AT FORD PLANT SATURDAY

Lt. Gov. Walter N. Davis will officiate Saturday afternoon at a brief ceremony marking the start of construction work on the $8,000,000 assembly plant to be erected by the Ford Motor Co. near Lambert-St. Louis Field.

W. K. Edmunds, regional Ford manager from Chicago, and James P. Roberts, St. Louis branch manager, will take part in the concrete-pouring ceremony, which will be preceded by a luncheon for Ford dealers of the metropolitan area at the Park Plaza Hotel.

The plant, which will employ 3000 workers and turn out 500 automobiles a day when operating at capacity, is expected to go into production next fall. It will be a brick and steel building with approximately 700,000 square feet of floor space on a 99-acre tract east of Lindbergh boulevard and north of Brown road.

INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTOR TO OPEN TWO NEW BRANCHES

Leases for two new branch offices of the collector of internal revenue, one in the Grand-Gravois area and one in Wellston, were announced today by Collector James P. Finnegan.

The new South St. Louis branch will be established on the second floor of the Yeckel Building, 3542 Gravois avenue. The 4000 square feet of floor space will be utilized as a complete office for making and filing returns and for the sale of revenue stamps.

The plant, which will employ 3000 workers and turn out 500 automobiles a day when operating at capacity, is expected to go into production next fall. It will be a brick and steel building with approximately 700,000 square feet of floor space on a 99-acre tract east of Lindbergh boulevard and north of Brown road.

The Wellston office, 1465 Hodiament avenue, with only half as much space, will be a branch of the Clayton office, 24 North Meramec avenue. It will be used only for making and filing income tax returns and receiving payments.

Congressman Sabath

He Takes Dim View Of Big Social Event

By Doris Fleson

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14. REP. ADOLPH J. SABATH of Illinois, at 80 and with 39 years of service the dean of the House, has written a letter of paternal remonstrance to President Truman about some events on the White House social calendar.

ADOLPH J. SABATH

Sabath takes a dim view of the lavish dance which Mrs. George Mesta, who has oil and steel millions, is about to give for Margaret Truman. And he hopes never to read again in the newspapers that ex-Congressman Ham Fish, for years political enemy No. 1 of the Democratic administration, enjoyed a dish of tea at the White House with Mrs. Truman.

The chairman of the powerful Rules Committee explained to the President that he felt these entertainments were out of line with his announced purposes. He thought they would surely be misunderstood by the party rank and file.

THE GENTLEMAN from Illinois will get short change from Missourian Truman, who is strictly Southern in his reactions to any criticism of his wife and daughter. The President will learn to be philosophical about these things as it is borne in on him that the White House social life is subjected to a spotlight as searching and often more pitiless than that turned upon its political course.

Mrs. Mesta, who recently gave her niece a gilded debut in Newport, has taken the Herbert

His brother, Prince Sigvard, in 1934 also renounced his royal rights to marry for love. Prince Carl and Mrs. Wijkmark plan to be married at once in New York. ## Gala Party of the Season

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.

NOT since the Herbert Hoovers owned the S Street home that is now leased by Mrs. George Mesta has that residence been the scene of more social interest than it is today. Promising to be THE party of the season is the dance Mrs. Mesta will give there tomorrow night in honor of Miss Margaret Truman. Debutantes from New York, Newport, Philadelphia and Baltimore will mingle with Washington buds in a company of several hundred guests.

"What thrills me," said a local lovely, "is that there will be eight boys for every girl present." In Washington, where the male shortage has always been acute, that's something.

Coming down from New York for the party will be Mrs. Mesta's niece, Miss Betty Tyson, whose debut in Newport last summer outshined all similar affairs of the season. And heading this way from California is Emil Coleman and his orchestra, which will play for the dance.

I don't know anyone but energetic and able Mrs. Mesta who would attempt to give two gala fetes in one month. Her supper party last week after the Women's Press Club dinner for President and Mrs. Truman gathered in more than 500 guests who stayed on . . . and on.

—HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

Hoover house here on fashionable S street. Like many famous hostesses she is not an Easterner but a Westerner, her roots being in Oklahoma where her father struck it rich in oil. Mrs. Mesta launched her present social career here last February with an exclusive party for 100 at the Sulgrave Club in honor of the then Vice President and Mrs. Truman.

HER ENTERTAINMENT for Margaret Truman and her young friends will be a dance. She has told the society reporters that she is flying an orchestra to Washington from California for it, a touch that may, Sabath suggests, seem a bit excessive to the men on the picket line. However, Mrs. Mesta does not attempt a political salon; she likes to give parties.

Mrs. Mesta is sliding smoothly along a groove well worn with the years. Washington is a mecca for wealthy widows with no particular career in life. The most famous of them is Evelyn Walsh McLean. Another was the late Mrs. Jacob Leander Looe of Kansas City who had biscuit millions. There are many less well known.

Finding a Sitter

By Christopher Bilopp

IN our present state of society in which nobody is willing to "stay nights," the only hope young parents have of being on the job less than 24 hours a day is the sitter.

It is essential, therefore, to find a sitter who is willing to sit. This is a matter of salesmanship. Your task is to sell your child to the sitter. If the prospective sitter is a boy, tell him your child is crazy about boys. If a girl, tell her your child dotes upon girls. If an elderly person, explain that your child does best under the direction of those of riper years.

Present to the prospective sitter the picture of a child who just loves to go to bed when told. Dissipate any idea that your child has a will of its own and when crossed is quick to answer back.

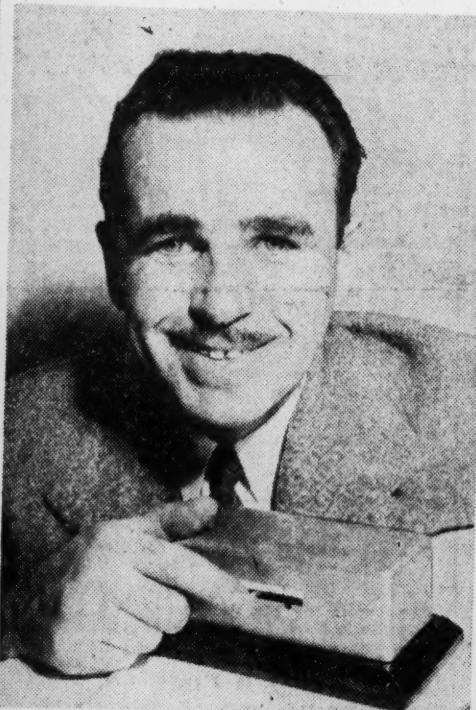

Assure the sitter that only under the severest emotional strain does your child kick, bite, scratch, slap or hurt things. It is advisable at this point to remark that if the child should have an off-night the sitter is at liberty to bind and gag the child, and no questions asked.

The general impression to be given is that of a child slumbering peacefully, not asking for drinks of water, nor waking out of a bad dream and screaming for its parents; and of the sitter just sitting until the parents return and hand over a virtually unscarred couple of dollars.

If any time is left over after the child has been sold to the sitter, it may be usefully employed trying to sell the sitter to the child.

But even under the best conditions parents will spend a nervous evening, starting every time the telephone rings, and wondering anxiously how the sitter and the child are making out.

What swank hotel doorman on the east side of Fifth Avenue dropped $3600 on the horses the other afternoon? . . . Why are his friends in the State Department trying to put in a fix for Nazi Hans Thomsen, now in Spain? Didn't he do enough damage last time here? . . . After years of estrangement didn't the Arturo DeCordovas reconcile in Mexico recently? . . . Will Churchill's daughter Sarah accept Lou Walters' offer of a four-figure salary to appear in his H'wood Latin Quarter revue? . . . Did you know that Marguerite Chapman, (star of "One Way to Love") is volleying in the heart dept with tennis Fred Perry? . . .

WHAT ARE all those F.B.I. agents doing around so many check-cashing firms? Keeping tabs on transactions over $500? . . . Isn't Mrs. Geo. F. Rothschild now in Reno waiting for her March abrogation? She left him after 55 days, and he says no more Russian "Countesses" for him. . . . Have you noticed all those customs officials double-O'ing merchant ships on the New York to Holland run? They are there because of all those tales about chocolate and coffee being allegedly traded for diamonds which come into the United States sans "declarations."

WASNT DIANA BARRYMORE right in the middle of that incident the other night in the Mocambo parking lot? When Dana Andrews and Hans Ludwig measured each other but were separated in time. . . . When are Nadenia Hutton and Stanley Rumbough Jr. (he's the Colgate heir) going to become a merger? Nadenia's step-pop is ex-Ambassador J. Davies. . . . Did you know that Dick Haymes and his brother, Bob Stanton, have the Hollywood rights on the Buddy and Jerry Lester family feud? . . . Was the last Garden fight "a deal"? . . . Which member of Truman's Cabinet turns in your name to the Maryland police if your car passes his? . . . Doesn't anyone in that ad agency know that Paul Douglas and Judy Holliday of "Born Yesterday" are sensational clicks in that hit? Then howcum the adverts (up to Feb. 8) omitted their names? . . . Did you hear about a scathing letter Wm. Fields sent to Spencer Tracy over the star's quitting the cast of "The Rugged Path"? Insiders say it was a sizzler.

ZIT TRUE that Marshall Field is going to make the initials U. S. A. make him richer? Yes, it is. . . . Did you hear about John Lardner? He will be the subject of an article by the American Medical Ass'n. It seems that while covering Iwo Jima (for his mag) John received a bullet wound in the hip and didn't even notice it. The bullet came out by itself 11 months later. Caused him no trouble, and doctors removed the last of its traces last week. . . . What magazine has ordered a "study" of editor Harold Ross and his publication? The thesis is a dilly. . . . And such easy money!

JUST WHY is Sec'y of State Byrnes holding up accepting the resignation of Jimmy Dunn? . . . Talk about situations, did you know that actress Ann Jeffers and her husband (Capt. Robert Serna) reconciled because they couldn't find separate apartments? . . . Did you hear that Greer Garson's new ticket at Metro calls for coin that almost matches L. B. Mayer's—well, nearly, anyhow. . . . How about this one? The new British Ambassador to the United States was knighted only two weeks ago because they still think over there that we are impressed by titles. Are they kidding? . . . Did you know that the Donald O'Connors of the screen (barely out of their teens) are threatening? . . . And that Senator Burton K. Wheeler's Girl Friday (May Folklore) was sealed to Ralph E. ## The Record Makers

By Charles Menees

SEVERAL RECORD items in the jazz vein are available here, or soon will be. Most interesting of them in Pianist Erroll Garner's Savoy pairing of "Laura" and "Somebody Loves Me," both with bass and drums. Garner is a sensational jazz newcomer who has technique, ideas and a beat, all apparent on these sides. Gene Krupa, for Columbia, braves "Hop, Skip and Jump," a catchy ditty sung well by Anita O'Day (no longer with Krupa), and "Yesterdays," a moody tenor solo by Charlie Ventura. Fortunately, Ventura keeps his high notes to a minimum. Herb Jeffries, ex-Ellington singer, and his band turn in a neat Ecclester side, "Tisco Cicco," sung a la Ella Mae Morse by Pat Kay. Flipover is "Got Your Love in My Heart," vocalized by Jeffries with Joe Ligins's Honeydrippers.

EARL HINES'S too-long-absent piano comes to life again on his new ARA disc of "At the El Grotto," an instrumental, and "Nonchalant Man," sung by Lord Essex. Harry Edison, Basie trumpeter, leads his quintet through "Laura," all Edison's solo, and "I Blowed and Gone," with Pianist Arnold Ross and Alto Willie Smith also coming through nicely. It's a Philo pairing, as is Howard McGhee's trumpet solo on "Stardust," spoiled by too-fancy background, and "My Love Comes Tumbling," by Leonard Feather's Hiptet. Victor's first platter by Henry "Red" Allen's jazz group is disappointing. There's too much frantic singing by Allen on "Buz Me" and "Get the Mop (The Ignorant Stick)," latter headed for big juke success. Red's trumpet and J. C. Higginbotham's trombone have both been much better on wax.

LES BROWN'S "Doctor, Lawyer, Indian Chief" and Pearl Bailey's "Personality" (both Columbia) run poor seconds to the Betty Hutton and Johnny Mercer Capitol classics. Butch Stone's singing of "D.L.I.C." is just fair as the band's punchy ensemble work and solos save the side. Doris Day's "Day by Day" vocal goes well with Tenor Ted Nash's obligato. Miss Bailey's "Personality" is too slow and her "Don't Like 'Em" also falls in the mediocre class. Dinah Shore's "Shoo Fly Pie" will run fairly close to Capitol's Kenton-Christy version. It's Dinah's snappiest in a long time. Also on her first Columbia biscuit is "Here I Go Again." Tommy Tucker's band continues to improve on "Take Care" and "When the One You Love." Bing Crosby's pairing of "McNamara's Band" and "Dear Old Donegal" have Bing employing Irish brogue as The Jesters and Bobby Haggart's band lend assistance. "McNamara's Band"—it plays for "wedding and wakes"—should be a hit. Jimmy Dorsey's best for Decca in ages is "J. D.'s Boogie," with nice piano and guitar work, and "Lover," with muted brass playing in attractive stop time. Lucky Millinder's "All the Time," (in Busse rhythm) and "Darlin'" are just average.

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

FROM my own personal standpoint—and I'm sure every delegate to the U.N.O. conference must feel the same way—the experience of watching this organization begin its work has been exceptionally interesting. Merely listening to so many points of view is not only good discipline but opens up vast fields of knowledge which most of us need to explore if we are going to meet the needs of the next few years intelligently.

While it is reported that there is not actual starvation throughout Europe, there is hunger practically everywhere. That means people with less energy for work and less resistance to disease. However, the physical factor is not the only thing, nor perhaps the most serious thing, that worries the keenest observers.

We must remember that a large part of Europe was swept by invading armies not only once, but twice. First, the Nazis came and, in every village, town and city that they occupied, they removed leaders they suspected of being unfriendly to them, putting in others. Then, the Allies came along and got rid of those whom they could not trust.

WE KNOW, from all we have heard, how difficult it has been to find people to organize and carry on civil government as well as initiate and guide reconstruction. Armies of occupation cannot take the place of a country's own civilian leaders. However, throughout Europe, many of the former leaders, both men and women, are now gone. That is why I think it will take some time before we see a real tackling of reconstruction problems by people who look out on ruined fields and crumbling towns.

In addition, there is a floating population without roofs over their heads, with scant food and clothing, and with no real purpose in life. Is it any wonder that they frequently are driven to desperation? Out of people who fought in resistance movements and for whom the greatest virtue was to lie, cheat, kill and destroy, it is difficult to build a law-abiding community where the old standards of right and wrong, of public and private morality, must exist again.

Someone asked me the other day how it was going to be possible to make the people of North and South America understand the situation in Europe today. For us in the United States, the only real hope of understanding is to think of our own postwar problems magnified far beyond anything we ever imagined. We must try to think what it would mean if our big cities lay in ruins, if our railroads had to be completely rebuilt, if our people had to return to pioneer conditions.

Somehow, we must stretch our imagination. Being a part of this first U.N.O. Assembly has, I think, helped me as an individual to stretch my own imagination.

I'M FRANK TO SAY it is always a surprise to me to find how passionately men can feel about rules of procedure. Toward the end of our work in the assembly committee on which I served, we spent three hours one afternoon arguing about rules. I found it hard to grow excited about them when I was unable to see that they affected the substance of our future action one way or another.

I know that, in parliamentary gatherings, rules of procedure are very important, but I wonder if this has not been built up to unnecessary proportions in our work here because so many of the delegates are lawyers—and legal minds love abstractions. I'm hoping we will always have balance in this organization, including people of various occupations. While legal advice and procedure are essential, it must be kept within reasonable bounds, since it's human needs that must be paramount.

I LIKED VERY MUCH the chairman of our committee, Prime Minister Per Fraser of New Zealand. He is such a fine person, and one cannot help having real affection for him. There were times, though, when I thought his Scotch convictions (he's a native of Scotland) found expression, even though he tried to be an impartial chairman.

I also want to mention Miss Freida Dalen of Norway, reporter for our committee. This is an important position because, in the way you write a committee's report, you can do what we in America call "slanting the news." Just a little change in emphasis may give a false impression of the way the committee really felt. Considering the heated arguments that went on in our committee and the insistence on diverse formulas and words to express exact meanings, I thought Miss Dalen did a wonderful piece of work.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

FOUR months ago my boy friend and I became engaged when he was home on leave. I have known this boy and his family for seven years, and his mother always was in favor of us getting engaged. Since we have done so, however, she has been acting strange.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest, but of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

hasn't. Mother refused to let me call or go to her house again, she says I am not to run after her, wait till she makes the next move. Do you think this is right? So far I have said nothing about this to my boy friend. Shall I write and see if he knows what can be the matter? I do so want my fiancée's mother to keep on liking me as she used to do. I can't think of anything I could have said or done to cause her to act like this. I have not dated a single fellow since I became engaged to her son and have had no desire to. Do you suppose someone has told her things that aren't true and she believes them as I have heard happening to other girls? If so how can I find out and convince her they are false? What can I do?

PUZZLED.

It is possible your fiancée's mother has been unable to go to see you for some good reason. If she has been friendly these last times you have been with her, why jump to conclusions? Don't worry your fiancée with the matter, but if his mother continues to remain away or seems unfriendly in any way toward you, ask her what has caused the change in her attitude toward you. Certainly if you have hurt her feelings or if she disapproves or is unhappy about anything connected with you personally, or with your engagement to her boy, it is only fair that she should tell you. Once you get to the root of the matter it can be cleared up and everyone friends again.

Dear Martha Carr:

I HAVE KNOWN a boy about 13 months but went out with him only a few times since he was stationed several miles away. He is now overseas and I hear from him regularly. I also write his mother who lives in another town. Christmas she sent me a beautiful gift which she had bought as his present to me. Will it be all right for me to send her a corsage as a valentine present? I am in my late teens. I hope to some day meet this boy's parents whom I really feel I know very well through the letters we have exchanged. Will it be all right for me to send the boy an Easter gift?

READER.

There are few times indeed, when any woman doesn't simply love being given a corsage. Send one to the boy friend's mother on Valentine's day by all means. As to an Easter gift for him, why not? I have some excellent suggestions in my Gift Suggestions lists, which you may have if you will send me a stamped self-addressed envelope.

IN ANSWER TO "Waiting": I'm afraid there is nothing you can do regarding correspondence between the boy friends and the girls they have met overseas. Try not to exhibit jealousy. Remember, realistically, that after all you are right here on the ground floor—they are thousands of miles and an ocean away, and take heart. Commuting back and forth such a distance is a little expensive, you'll probably win out in the end and the other gal be quite forgotten.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

FEW situations met by our returning veterans are harder than going to see the families of lost comrades. The following letter explains: "My son is coming home soon from overseas. Several of his friends in the neighborhood will not be coming back and I am wondering whether my son should go to see these families or whether that could make them feel worse? If he should go, then is it proper for him to talk about their boys who will not come back or not to bring up the subject?"

He would go to see only the families of his own personal friends and in such cases he would talk about them with appreciation and affection.

DEAR MRS. POST: Please seat the dinner at which my engagement is to be announced. I mean, who are the honor guests and what places should be accorded them? In addition to aunts, uncles and dearest friends, there will be present the groom-elect's mother, my mother and father and, of course, my fiancée and I.

Answer: The groom's mother is seated at your father's right, an uncle on her right and your mother next to him. You should be on your fiancée's right at the opposite end of the table. All of the others ranged in between, youngest on your end, oldest on theirs.

DEAR MRS. POST: What is the proper behavior of the men at the table when during the course of the evening in a night club, one, or perhaps two, of the ladies leave to go to the powder room? Should all the men get up at the table and does this same procedure take place when the ladies return to the table?

Answer: Yes. The only advice is that the ladies try to leave and sit down again so quickly that the men have no chance to do more than make a gesture to rise. At a large table, only the one she was talking with would half rise. Others would not notice.

DEAR MRS. POST: Is it proper to send birth announcements to people who are merely acquaintances?

Face Life, if You Would Gain Heights

By Elsie Robinson

CAN you shut out suffering? Can you protect yourself from heartache? You can. But there's a price to pay, as Clare has discovered. Here's her letter. It's the letter of a clever, cautious, modern girl who is determined that life shall not get the best of her. She has devised a philosophy to that end—and it's a good philosophy. But—if you don't let life get the best of you, can you get the best of life? That's what Clare wants to know.

Dear Miss Robinson: I feel that in facing life young people should select a "certain philosophy for themselves. I selected mine. I decided that I, myself, could determine just how I would be affected by other people—particularly men—and I decided that I would love, allow myself to be loved, just as much as I thought best. In short, I felt that I could save myself suffering if I would build a wall about my heart.

I took that attitude, and it worked. Other girls lost their heads and broke their hearts over men. I didn't. Other girls were at the mercy of their own emotions. I wasn't. My wall protected me. But now I am beginning to be afraid of my own calmness. I find that I am cool and indifferent to everything.

I wonder if, in saving myself heartache, I haven't taken all the warmth out of life. I am inclined to believe that if you build a wall strong enough to shut out sorrow, joy can never get in. Am I wrong?

CLARE. You're a hundred times right, Clare. And the thing you have discovered is the very department of life, as well as to the department of love.

If you shut out life, life will shut you out.

If you give nothing, you will get nothing.

You may, it is true, achieve safety—but that is the most contemptible of life's gifts.

You may escape the storms, but you will never know the glory of the sun and stars, nor feel the great winds, nor walk with the dawn.

Dare to live!

Dare to let life have its way with you!

Dare to cry and laugh and tremble and blaze and yearn!

Dare to be hungry and hurt and humiliated!

Knock down your wall—away with your "safety first" signs!

Let the rabbits have their burrows and the mice their holes, but as for you—stand up like a man and face life.

And what will life do to you?

Life will whip you cruelly. Life will freeze you and blister you and scar you. It will cast you into the blackest depths.

But life will also lift you up to the shining heights. It will put strength within your scared hide and breed mysteries in your bruised brain. And your broken heart will be so wide that it will welcome all the life will do for you.

That is what life will do for you if you have the courage to face it.

And if you haven't, then life will leave you alone. And that is the cruellest hell a man may know.

WHAT TO EXPECT TOMORROW.

Sun in Aquarius.

General Tendencies—This is the last call for financial dealings for some time. After tomorrow your judgment will be far less acute than at present, and you will be moved by all sorts of emotional reactions which have no place in business deals. If you have such contacts, then apply tomorrow's indications toward practical affairs in your circle of interests.

This seems to be a time for cleaning up details in all departments, maybe finding some which you have forgotten and which can still be important.

If Tomorrow Is Your Birthday.

This month surely favors the women in its birthday influences. The men seem to be shoved around a little bit by fate unless they exert themselves to avoid such conditions. It will be easy to move about and the changes will work out well, even though they seem unusual at first glance. Perhaps that new house you have been looking for will be found in a location which you never dreamed of previously. There is a chance for financial advancement, but be sure to go slow when it comes to new responsibilities.

Tomorrow's Watchword—Speaking of language, tomorrow's reference, I like this: "I could not sleep when I got on a hunt for an idea, until I had caught it; and when I thought I had it, I was not satisfied until I had repeated it over and over again, until I had it in language plain enough for any boy to understand. This was a kind of passion with me, and it has stuck by me." Who said it? Well, see if you can guess and then jot down in your memory that it was spoken by the master of English, Abraham Lincoln.

Frankie's Fight for Tolerance

Radio Crooner Sinatra's Campaign in East Has Shown Definite Results

FRANKIE SINATRA ADDRESSING SCHOOL STUDENTS ON RACIAL AND RELIGIOUS UNDERSTANDING; AT RIGHT, CLOSE-UP OF CROONER.

By Virginia Irwin

NEW YORK, Feb. 13

TIME was, and not so long ago, when school teachers wished that Frank Sinatra's parents had smothered their singing offspring with a down comfort in his cradle. They watched their teen-age pupils go ga-ga over this guy with the mused hair and big eyes and groaned aloud when the kids started flunking compound fractions because their study time was taken up organizing Frank Sinatra fan clubs. Evidently, the teachers prayed that The Voice, menace to teen-age normality, would come down with a virulent, acute, permanent and combined case of laryngitis and lockjaw.

But now something has happened. Recently, the Teachers' Union asked Frankie if he would address their convention here in New York. They had found out that Frankie Boy had, for almost a year now, been doing some pretty important work, with definite results. They had discovered that his was a quiet but effective voice in the fight for promoting racial and religious understanding in this country.

Members of the Teachers' Union didn't come right out and say so in the letter, but they intimated that they'd like to know just what approach Frankie had been taking with the kids on this subject. They wanted to know how he got "the message" across and also intimated that he'd been getting "excellent" marks on his job, whereas they'd either flunked out or just got by with "passing."

Sinatra's explanation is pretty basic stuff.

"So simple," he says, "that you wouldn't believe it would work." But it has. Sinatra just talks the kids' language.

I was a kid," he told a bunch of kids at the World Youth Rally in New York. "Things were going on that I never suspected. I was getting a pushing around over in Hoboken because my parents were Italian. I was getting this pushing around and didn't even know why. Me—The Brain. But I know now. Yes sir, now I know why when I was going to school over in Jersey, a bunch of guys threw rocks at me and called me a Dago. I know a lot of things now. I know why they used to call the Jewish kids in the neighborhood 'kikes' and 'sheenies' and the colored kids 'niggers'."

Let's take it right from the top. Ever hear that corny old saying, 'stick and stones will break my bones but names will never hurt me'? Want to know something? That's not only corny—it's wrong. Names can hurt you. They can hurt you even more than sticks and stones."

When Senator Bilbo called a portion of our population "mongrels," Sinatra started thinking. In fact he began to brood. He remembered, as he told the kids at the World Youth Rally, the days when other kids in Hoboken used to throw rocks at him and call him a "little Dago." Frank prophesied something about it. At first he was discouraged by his advisers, but then a guy in New York by the name of George Evans, who's Frank's press agent and feels pretty strongly on the subject of racial and religious intolerance himself, advised him to go ahead.

"We stood a lot to lose," Evans told this reporter. "But Frankie felt so strongly on the subject that we decided to take the chance."

Frank has had some pretty harsh things said about him, but by and large he's come out with flags flying. In fact, the Bureau for Inter-Cultural Education has just awarded him a plaque and the Common Council for American Unity has given him a cup for his work in the field of promoting racial and religious tolerance. Workers in this field point out that things could have been mighty different if Sinatra, with all his influence with teen-age youth, had been a different sort of guy. Suppose, they suggest, that he had been in sympathy with the America Firsters.

Tolerant by nature and quick to see the under-dog's side because he once occupied the land on that side of the fence in Hoboken, the guy with the bow tie has really thrown himself into the one thing he lives for outside of mike-hugging—this fight for tolerance.

In Harlem, when a high school race riot broke out, he risked his neck to address two audiences of 2000 kids each on "understanding." In Gary, Ind., not so long ago, when the school kids themselves went on a strike based on racial prejudice, Frank spoke to 6000 of them for an hour and a quarter and got in some good licks on racial and religious tolerance. And recently when a bunch of young hoodlums were found defacing a synagogue in Brooklyn, Frank spent two days going through the neighborhood hunting out and lecturing the culprits—and anybody else who would listen. The upshot of this was that other Brooklyn kids organized themselves into Sinatra Vigilantes, sworn to do their best to break up anti-Jewish mobs or mobs of anti-anything.

Frank has behind him, in his crusade, the Youth Builders of America, the Bureau of Inter-Cultural Education, the National conference on Christians and Jews, the American Council on Racial Relations and the Common Council for American Unity. He has made more than 150 speeches in schools, settlement houses, recreation centers and youth rallies. One of his biggest audiences recently was the gathering of 2000 prominent movie producers, stars and executives when he addressed the Amusement Division of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, at the Astor in New York.

"I don't pose as a child psychologist when I try to explain things to the kids," he says. "I just tell 'em that I went through all that business about throwing rocks through store windows and hitchhiking rides on the back of trolley cars and that I guess now I know as much as they do and I want to tell them a few things. And then I launch in and tell them that no scientist in the world can examine blood and tell from which race of man it came. Take a brain from any man's head and no one can tell you positively from what race that brain came. Because every race produces men with big brains and men with small brains. Men with big, strong muscles, and men like me. Every race produces geniuses, smart men, and fools. All human beings, from whatever race have exactly 27 bones in their hands, and 26 bones in their feet. The lungs, the liver, the intestines and other parts of all human beings are exactly alike. Now that gets us back to this prejudice thing. How can we be prejudiced against people who are exactly the same as we are? The only difference between a Chinaman and an Englishman is the color of his skin. Find an Englishman with jaundice and you have no difference at all except that the Englishman doesn't feel well."

Soon Frank hopes to visit the schools of St. Louis with his plea for racial and religious tolerance.

How It Started

By Jean Newton

Weasel Words.

The weasel is a slender animal noted for its ability to get out of a tight spot, and it is that fact to which one would naturally attribute the origin of the expression "weasel words"—words which gloss over a situation, play safe, and so get one out of a tight fix—an expression always heard around election time! But there is more to the phrase than meets the eye—it is to another trick of this little animal, not so well known, that it really owes its origin.

Experts will tell you that if you place an egg near the weasel he will bore a hole in it, suck it out, and leave the shell, which resembles an egg but is in reality, then, nothing! Hence, "weasel word" was a "natural" also to describe a term which devitalized the phrase in which it was used, which robbed it of its force and meaning.

Sure enough, the earliest use of "weasel words" was in connection with political party platforms. The first recorded application of the phrase, at the turn of the century, was in a story by Stewart Chaplin, in the Century Magazine of June 1900:

"... Weasel words are words that suck the life out of the words next to them, just as a weasel sucks an egg and leaves the shell. If you heft the egg afterwards it's as light as a feather, and not very filling when you are hungry, but a basketful of them would make quite a show, and would bamboozle the unwary. I know them well, and mighty useful they are, too. Although the gentleman couldn't write much of a platform, he's an expert on weasel-ling. I've seen him take his pen and go through a proposed plank or resolution and weasel every flat-footed word in it. Then the weasel word pleases one man, and the word that's been weasled pleases another."

It was Theodore Roosevelt, however, who really popularized the phrase. He did that in a speech delivered in St. Louis, on May 31, 1916, in which he upbraided President Wilson for the latter's stand on military training for Americans. It was in the midst of World War I and Roosevelt felt we could not avoid fighting and were not preparing fast enough. Here is the pertinent context of his speech:

"In connection with the word training, the words universal voluntary have exactly the same effect an acid has on an alkali—a neutralizing effect. One of our defects as a nation is a tendency to use what have been called weasel words. When a weasel sucks eggs, the meat is sucked out of the egg. If you use a weasel word after another there is nothing left of the other. Now, you can have universal training, or you can have voluntary training, but when you use the word voluntary to qualify the word universal you are using a weasel word; it has sucked all the meaning out of universal. The two words flatly contradict one another."

Chocolate Dessert

Empty contents of one package of chocolate pudding in the top of a double boiler and add two cups milk, gradually stirring to keep smooth. Cook over hot water, stirring until mixture is smooth and thickened. Cook for 15 minutes, then add to two beaten egg yolks. Return to double boiler, add one-fourth teaspoon salt and two tablespoons butter and cook for two minutes. Cool slightly, then fold in the whites beaten stiff with the sugar (three tablespoons). Add few drops of peppermint extract. Use a bread pan (8½x4½x2½ inches) lined with waxed paper. Pour chocolate mixture between layers of thinly cut cake (angel food or sunshine). Cover and chill for 24 hours. Eight servings.

GRANDMA SPEAKIN'...

Never knock a feller for tryin' to make an honest dollar. Hikin' yerself up the ladder o' success is hard enough th'out tryin' to knock others off.

A Table-Grade Margarine is what folks want for their table—and that means Nu-Maid. It's the only margarine that's certified by the maker to be Table-Grade.

I always say, a helpin' hand is worth two that push.

Say, you know, "Table-Grade" means top quality in margarine. That's why Nu-Maid Margarine is just dandy for makin' extra-special pies and cakes. Next time you see that feller who sells you groceries, ask him fer Table-Grade Nu-Maid Margarine.

Do not have geraniums in large pots; they are fibrous and these fibers spread over a large area, if there is one, the result being few blossoms or none at all.
